THE OLD GREEN LANE.

BY ELIZA COOK.

'Twas the very merry summer time
That garland hills and dells,
And the south wind rung a fairy chime
Upon the foxglove bells;
The cuckoo stood on the lady-birch
To bid her last good bye—
The lark sprung over the village church,
And whistled to the sky,
And we had come from the harvest sheaves
A blithe and tawny train,
And tracked our path with poppy leaves,
Along the old green lane.

'Twas a pleasant way on a sunny day,
And we were unhappy set,
As we idly bent where the streamlet went
To get our fingers wet,
With the dog-rose here and the orchis there,
And the woodbine twining through;
With the broad trees meeting everywhere,
And the grass still damp with dew.
Ah! we all forgot in that blissful spot
The names of care and pain,
As we lay on the bank by the shepherd's cot,
To rest in the old green lane.

Oh! days gone by! I can but sigh
As I think of that rich hour,
When my heart in its glee but seemed to be
Another woodside flower;
For though the trees be still as fair,
And the wild bloom still as gay—
Though the south winds send as sweet an air,
And heaven as bright a day;
Yet the merry set are far and wide,
And we never shall meet again—
We shall never ramble side by side
Along that old green lane.

THE DOUBLY WON.

A TALE OF LIFE.

The Chambellans were an old Yorkshire family, which had once held a high place amongst the landed gentry of the country. A knight of that family had been a Crusader in the army of Richard Cœur de Lion; and now he lay, with all his insignia about him, in the parish church, whilst others of his race reposed in the same channel, under monuments and brasses, which spoke of their name and fame during their generation. In the lapse of time, the family had become impoverished, and gradually merged into the class of yoemen, retaining only a remnant of the broad lands, which had once belonged to them. In 1744-5, the elder branch of the family, consisting of the father, two sons, and a daughter, resided at what had once been the mansion house. It had been built originally in the reign of Stephen, and was a curious specimen of different kinds of architecture, bearing traces of its gradual transformation from the strongbold of the days when it was no metaphor to say that every man's house was his castle, down to the more peaceful dwelling of lawful and orderly times. It had now become little more than the better sort of farm house.—What had been the tilt yard was filled with a row of comfortable barns, cart sheds and hay stacks: a low wall of rough grey stones enclosed a small garden: a narrow gravel walk, edged on each sides with currant trees and gooseberry bushes, led up to the fine old porch, embowered in the ivy and creepers which covered nearly the whole of the building with its luxuriant growth. The old gateway at the entrance of the yard was still surrounded with the "coat armour" of the family, carved in stone; but the gates themselve had long disappeared, had been replaced by a common wooden farm yard gate. The "coat armour" itself was covered with moss, and a fine crop of grass and houseleek grew among the stones of the walls, which would have communicated a desolate appearance, if the farm yard arrangements had not been orderly.

Hasted Hall, as it was called, was six miles from the city of York, and stood about a mile from the main road. The only approach to it was by a long rough lane, so much cut up by the carts and cattle, that it was almost impassable to foot passengers, except in the height of summer or depth of winter, when the mud had been dried up by the sun or the frost.

The father and brothers attended the different fairs and markets in the ordinary course of business; their sister, Mary Chambellan, managed the affairs of the house and dairy. She led a very secluded life, for they had no neighbors, and of general society there was none nearer than the city itself. Mary, however, had plenty of occupation, and was quite contented with her lot. She was nearly seventeen, tall, well formed, and with an air of composed dignity which suited well with her position, which was of great responsibility for so young a person. Her mother, who had been dead rather more than a year, had been a woman of superior education and strong character. To her Mary owed all the instruction she had ever received, and the tinge of refinement which made her manners very superior to those of either her father or brothers. She, however, was quite unconscious of this, and they all lived very happily together in the old out-of-the-way place. It happened that, in the spring of 1745, an uncle of her mother's, who resided at York, was about to celebrate the marriage of one of his daughters; Mary Chambellan, with her father and brothers, were invited to the festivities. The father would have sent an excuse for himself and Mary; he was getting old, and did not like to be put out of his usual ways.—The brothers, however, pleaded earnestly that their sister might have a little recreation. Finally consent was obtained, and she went with her brothers.

It was a very fine wedding, and a ball and supper finished the rejoicings. Some of the officers, quartered with their regiments in York, were invited to this ball.—Amongst others was a certain Captain Pollexfen. He was a young man of good family in the south of England, heir to a large fortune, and extremely handsome and attractive on his own account independent of these advantages.

He was, by all accounts, a type of the fine, high-spirited young fellows of those days: good-tempered, generous and overflowing with wild animal life and spirits, which he threw off in a thousand impetuous extravagances.—He could dance all night at a ball, ride a dozen miles to meet the hounds the following morning, and, after a hard day's sport, sit down to a deep carouse, and be as fresh and gay after it as if he had been following the precepts of Lewis Cornaro. The women contended with each other to attract his attentions; but, although he was devoted to every woman he came near, and responded to their good will by flirting indefatigably, his attentions were so indiscriminate, that there was not one belle who could flatter herself that she had secured him for her "humble servant"—as lovers then were to style themselves. Mary Chambellan was not, certainly, the belle of the wedding ball room, and by no means equal in fortune or social position to most of the women present; but whether from perverseness, or caprice, or love of novelty, Henry Pollexfen was attracted by her, and devoted himself to her exclusively.

The next York Assembly was to take place in a few days: and this young man, who did not know what contradiction meant, made Mary promise to be his partner there. Old Mr. Chambellan, who thought his daughter had been from home quite long enough, fetched her back himself on the following day; and Mary would as soon have asked to go to the moon as to remain to go to the assembly. Henry Pollexfen was extremely disappointed when he found Miss Chambellan had returned home; but he was too much caressed and sought after to be able to think long about the matter, and his sudden fancy soon passed away.

In the Autumn of the same year he met one of her brothers in the hunting field. Accident threw them together towards the close of a hard day's run; when, in clearing a stone fence, some loose stones were dislodged, and struck Captain Pollexfen's horse, laming him severely. Night was coming on; it was impossible to return to his quarters on foot; and young Chambellan invited his fellow sportsman to go home with him—Halstead Hall being the nearest habitation. Although old Mr. Chambellan would as soon have opened his doors to a dragon, yet even he could find no fault under the circumstances and was constrained to welcome his dangerous guest with old fashioned hospitality. He soon became so charmed with his visitor, that he invited him to return, and the visiter gladly did so.

His almost forgotten admiration for Mary revived in full force the moment he saw her again. He soon fell desperately and seriously in love with her. Mary's strong and gentle character assumed great influence over his mercurial and impetuous disposition. That she became deeply attached to him, was nothing wonderful; she could scarcely have helped it, even if he had not sought to win her affections.

In a short time he made proposals of marriage for her to her father, who willingly consented, feeling, if the truth must be told, very much flattered at the prospect of such a son-in-law.

Henry Pollexfen then wrote a dutiful letter to his father, telling him how much he was in love, and how earnestly he desired permission to follow his inclinations.—Old Mr. Pollexfen had, like many other fathers, set his heart upon his son's making a brilliant match; and although consulting the "history of Yorkshire," where he found honorable mention of the Chambellan family, he could offer no objections on the score of birth, yet he thought his son might do better. He wished to make no direct opposition; on the contrary, he gave his conditional consent, only stipulating for time. He required that 12 months should elapse before the marriage took place when his son should be little more than 22, while Mary would be not quite nineteen. He wrote paternal letters to Mary, and polite epistles to her father. He even applied to head quarters for leave of absence for his son, whom he immediately summoned up to London, where his own duties, as member of parliament, would detain him for some time.

Under any other circumstances, Captain Pollexfen would have been delighted with this arrangement; but, as it was, he would infinitely have preferred being allowed to marry Mary at once. However, there was no help for it. Old Mr. Chambellan, himself, urged the duty of immediate obedience to his father's summons, and Pollexfen departed.

For many weeks his letters were as frequent as the post would carry them. He was very miserable under the separation; and, much as she loved him, Mary could not wish him to be otherwise. His regiment was suddenly ordered abroad: the necessary hurry of preparation, and the order to join his detachment at Canterbury without delay, rendered it impossible for Captain Pollexfen to see Mary before his departure. He wrote her a tender farewell, sent her his picture, and exhorted her to write frequently, and never to forget him for an instant; promising, of course, everlasting constancy for himself.

There was little chance that Mary should forget him, in that old lonely house, without either friends or neighbors. Besides, the possibility of ceasing to love her affianced husband never occurred to her. With Captain Pollexfen it was different. Under no circumstances was his a character that would bear absence unchanged; and the distraction of foreign scenes, and the excitement of his profession, soon banished the image of Mary from his mind. At length he felt it a great bore that he was engaged to be married. The regiment remained sixteen months absent, and he heartily hoped that she would have forgotten him.

Mary's father died shortly after her lover's departure; the family property descended to her brothers, and she was left entirely dependant upon them. Captain Pollexfen's letters had entirely ceased; Mary had received no communication for more than six months, when she saw the return of his regiment announced, and his name gazetted as colonel. He, however, neither came to see her, nor wrote to her, and Mary became seriously ill. She could no longer conceal her intense sufferings from her brothers. Under the impression that she was actually dying, they wrote to her lover, telling him of her situation. Colonel Pollexfen was conscience stricken by the letter. He declared to the brothers that he intended to act as became a man of honor, and wrote to Mary with something of his old affection, revived by remorse; excusing his past silence, begging forgiveness, and promising to go down to see her, the instant he could obtain leave of absence.

Under the influence of this letter Mary revived; but the impression made upon her future husband soon passed away—he daily felt less inclination to perform his promise. He was living in the midst of fashionable society, and was more courted than ever, since by the death of his father he had come into possession of his fortune. He began to feel that he had decidedly thrown himself away; and by a most natural transition, he hated Mary for her claims upon him, and considered himself a very ill used victim.

Mary's brother finding that Colonel Pollexfen did not follow his letter, nor show any signs of fulfilling his engagement, would not submit to any more trifling. The elder made a journey to London, and demanded satisfaction, with the intimation that the younger brother would claim the same right when the first affair was terminated.

Colonel Pollexfen was not, of course, afraid of having even two duels on his hands at once; he had already proved his courage too well to allow a suspicion of that sort. His answer was characteristic. He told young Chambellan that he was quite ready to meet both him and his brother, but that he was under a previous engagement to marry their sister, which he wished to perform first, as otherwise circumstances might occur to prevent it; he should then be quite at their service, as it was his intention to quit the bride at the church door, and never to see her again!

The brother looked upon this as a pretext to evade the marriage altogether, but resolved, after some deliberation, to accept his proposal. They had great difficulty in prevailing upon their sister to agree to their wishes; but they, none of them seriously believed that he would carry out his threat, and Mary fancied that all danger of a duel would be evaded. A very liberal settlement was drawn up by Col. Pollexfen's direction, which he signed and sent to the church; a traveling charriot and four horses stood at the door. On entering, they found Col. Pollexfen pointing out to the friends who accompanied him, the monuments belonging to the Chambellan family. As soon as he perceived them he took his place at the altar, and the ceremony commenced without delay. As soon as it was concluded, he bowed with great politeness to all present, and said, "You are all here witnesses that I have performed my engagement!" Then, without even looking at his bride, he quitted the church, and, accompanied by his friend, entered the carriage which was in waiting, and drove rapidly away! Mary was carried senseless from the church, and for several weeks continued dangerously ill.

The real strength of her character now showed itself. She made no complaint; she did not even assume her husband's name, but took the appellation of Mrs. Chambellan. The settlement was returned to Colonel Pollexfen's lawyer with an intimation that it would never be claimed. She stilled the anger of her brothers, and would not endure a word to be said against her husband. She never alluded to him herself. A great change came over her; she did not seem to suffer nearly so much from her cruel position as might have been expected; her melancholy and depression gave place to a steady determination of purpose. In the brief space during which she and her husband had stood before the altar, she had realized the distance that existed between them in their positions in life. With a rare superiority, she understood how natural, it was he should have felt no desire to fulfill his boyish engagement she owned in her heart that she was not fitted to be the wife and companion of such a man as he had now become. Had she seen all this sooner, she would have released him; now she could no longer do so, and she resolved to fit herself to fill the station to which, as his wife, she had been raised.

The brief interview before the altar had stimulated to desperation her attatchment to him; and she felt that she must win him back or die. Mary had received very little education. In those days the instruction bestowed on most women was very limited; but Mary fancied that all gentlewomen, who moved in society were well informed; and her first step was to obtain some elementary books from the master of the boy's school at York, and begin, with undoubting simplicity, to learn history and geography, and all the things which she supposed every lady of her husband's acquaintance knew. A thirst for information was soon aroused in her; she had few advantages and very little assistance; but her energy and perseverence surmounted all obstacles, and she found a present reward in her labor. Her life ceased to seem either lonely or monotonous. Still, the spirit that worked within her was far more precious than any actual result she obtained. She had a noble object in view; and unconscious to herself, it purified her heart from all bitterness, or wounded vanity, or impatience. A great sorrow nobly borne, is a great dignity. The very insult which had seemed to condemn her to a wasted existence, was transformed into a source of life and fruitfulness, by the wise humility with which she accepted it.

Ten years passed by, and in the matured woman of thirty, few could have recognized the forsaken girl of nineteen. But the present only fulfilled the promise which was then latent in her character.

All this time, her husband endeavored to forget that he was married. Shortly after the ceremony, he went abroad with his regiment; and after some time spent in active service, he returned to England, and quitted the army with the brevet rank of general. He resided partly in London, and partly in Bath, leading the life of a man of fashion in those days, and making himself remarkable by his extravagancies.

About that time a young and beautiful actress appeared, who speedily became the object of adoration to all the young men of fashion about town.

General Pollexfen was one of her lovers, and carried her off one night from the theatre, when she came off the stage between the acts. He allowed her to assume his name, and lavished a fortune upon her caprices; although her extravagance and propensity for gambling involved him in debt. Ten years had thus passed, when the cousin, whose marriage was mentioned at the beginning of this story, was ordered to Bath, by her physician. She entreated Mary to accompany her, who, after some persuasion, consented. It was a formidable journey in those days, and they were to stay some months. They found a pleasant lodging. Mary, with some reluctance, was drawn into society, and occasionally accompanied her cousin to the assemblies, which were then in high vogue.

General Pollexfen was absent from Bath when his wife arrived there. He had been called up to London by some lawyer's business, and calculated on being absent three weeks.

It so chanced, however, that the business was concluded sooner than he expected, and that he returned to Bath without announcing his coming. He went at once to the assembly, and was walking through the rooms in a chafed and irritable mood, (having that night discovered the treachery of the beautiful actress, which had long been known to everybody else,) when a voice struck his ear which caused him to turn suddenly. He saw near at hand, a dignified and beautiful woman, who reminded him of some one he had seen before. She turned away on perceiving him—it was Mary. She had recognized her husband, and scarcely able to stand, she took the arm of her cousin, and reached the nearest seat.—Her husband, forgetting everything else in his impatience to learn who it was who had thus startled vague recollections, went hastily up to the Master of the Ceremonies, and desired to be introduced to—his own wife!

By some fatality, the Master of ceremonies blundered, and gave the name of Mary's cousin. This mistake gave Mary courage; for years she had dreamed of such a meeting, and the fear of loosing the opportunity nerved her to profit by it. She exerted herself to please him.—He had been rudely disenchanted from the graces of fine ladies, and was in a humor to appreciate the gentle home influence of Mary's manners; he was enchanted with her and begged to be allowed to follow up the acquaintance, and wait upon her next morning. Permission was of course given, and he handed Mary and her cousin to their chairs.

Mary was cruelly agitated; she had suffered so much during the ten preceeding years; the suspense and anxiety were too terrible to endure; it seemed as though morning would never come. Her husband was not much to be envied. He had discovered that she resembled the woman he had once so much loved, and then so cruelly hated—whom he married, and deserted; but though tormented by a thousand fancied resemblances, he had scarcely dared to hope that it could be her. The next day long before the lawful hour for paying visits, he was before her door, and obtained admittance. The resemblance by daylight was more striking than it had been on the previous evening and Mary's agitation was equal to his own. His impetuous appeal was answered. Overwhelmed with shame and repentance, and at the same time happy beyond expression, General Pollexfen passionately entreated his wife's forgiveness. Mary not only won back her husband, but regained with a thousand fold intensity, the love which had once been her's—regained it, never to loose it more!

The story soon became known, and created an immense sensation. They quitted Bath, and retired to her husband's family seat in Cornwall, where they continued chiefly to reside. They had one son, an only child, who died when he was but fifteen. It was an overwhelming affliction, and was the one mortal shadow on their happiness. They died within a week of each other; their honors and estates passing to a distant branch of the family.

☞ A trial about the right of property in a calf, lately took place at Burlington, Iowa. The difficulty lay in the color of the calf's tail; the witness of the plaintiff swore the tail was white; those of the defendant, that it was black. The Court was occupied two days with the case; the jury staid out till midnight and could not agree, and a new trial is to be had; the costs already amount to $300.

ALL FOR MONEY.

BY N. C. M. TAYLOR.

What a funny world is ours,
Very funny;
Full of sunshine, full of showers,
Full of money;
But the last is hard to get,
What a pity!
Many are in want of it,
In the city;
In the village, in the town,
Men are wandering up and down,
Through the valleys, o'er the hills,
Selling notions, vending pills;
And his land the farmer tills,
All for money,
That is funny!

What a funny world is ours,
Very funny!
Full of thorns, full of flowers,
Full of money;
Money, money, is the rage,
All are striving,
In this truly golden age,
To be thriving.
Concert singers travel round,
Murdering all harmonious sound,
Dandies undertake to preach,
Rustics leave their plows to teach,
Statesmen oft will make a speech,
All for money,
That is funny!

What a funny world is ours,
Very funny;
Full of sweets and full of sours,
Full of money:
Men, for money toil and slave,
Ceasing never,
From the cradle to the grave,
Striving ever.
Priests and cobblers take their tolls,
Blessing, patching up our souls,
Doctors either "cure or kill,"
Clerks will rob their merchant's till,
Ta'lors bring a wicked bill,
All for money,
That is funny!

What a funny world is this,
Very funny:
Full of misery, full of bliss,
Full of money:
May money! passing strange
Is thy power:
Men will change about for "change,"
Every hour.
Editors and printers toil,
Writers, sense and grammar spoil,
Teachers learn our boys to read,
Many men will shape their creed,
Lovers, lawyers, lie and plead,
All for money,
That is funny.

A WOLF STORY.

From the New York Journal of Commerce.

Talk of wolves, (said Black, one evening,) I can tell you a story that no other man on the river can tell.

When I first came to the cabin, there was no clearing within thirty miles, and the only neighbor I had was George B——, who died last year, up by the cedar hill, ten miles or so away. It was a little lonesome, and yet I liked it for a year, and I saw George three times during that twelve month. But the next six months I never saw a man, and I used to sit and look at myself in the still water over the side of my canoe, and like it, for it seemed as if I had company. But one day in November, I was tired of being alone, and started off towards evening to go up to George's. I crossed the river just here, and went along up the edge of the water, swinging my rifle in my hand, whistling for company's sake, for it made a pleasant echo in the woods. The night was coolish, very clear, and there was a pleasant moon.

Just as I reached the Rock brook, close on the side of the pond, I heard a growl that startled me, and stopping short, I saw a wolf standing with his paws buried in the carcass of a deer, while his jaws were full of flesh.—But he was not eating, for he had seen me, and seemed to be discussing the comparative merits of his meal which I presented for him. He was not any of your dog wolves, but a grizzly rascal as large as Leo yonder, with longer hair and stouter legs. He snarled once or twice more, and I was fool enough to show fight. If I had let him alone, he would have been content with his feed; for they are cowardly animals, except when there are droves of them, or unless you disturb their eating. I took a short aim at him and shot. He jumped the instant I pulled trigger, and I missed his breast and broke his forepaw. Then he yelled and came at me, and I heard as I thought, fifty more answer him. It was'nt ten seconds before I was in the first crotch of the nearest tree, and four of the grizzly scoundrels were under it, looking at me, whining and licking their lips, as if their mouths watered for me.

I didn't understand their language, or I would have suggested the idea of satisfying their appetites upon the deer which lay a few rods off. But I couldn't persuade them to take any hints of that sort; so I loaded my rifle and shot one of them dead. There was more for them to eat, if they had chosen to devour one of their own sort; but I couldn't blame them for refusing the lean, bony carcass of such a comrade, especially when a tolerably well fattened man was in the sapling close by, and the more especially when, if they had any eyes, they could see that the sapling was splitting in two at the crotch, and I must come down soon in spite of my repugnance to a closer acquaintance with them. So it was thought; and, before I had time to reload my rifle, and despatch another of them, crack went the tree, and I dropped my rifle just quick enough to catch with my arms and legs around the tree and hold on for life until I could get my knife from my pocket, open it, and shove it in my belt. That done, I watched my chance; and if ever there was a scared wolf, that was one when I alighted on his back and wound my arms around him, and we rolled away together. The other two didn't understand it, and backed off to watch the fight. A pretty moonlight tussle that was! At length the wolf got me under, and he and I both thought I was done for. He planted his two paws on my breast, and the claws left marks that are there yet, while he siezed my shoulder with his villainous jaws.

Black paused to show us the scars on his breast and arms, particularly the large scar where the flesh was torn from the bone on the shoulder. He continued:

I was a little faint when his teeth went in. It was unpleasant, and I had time to think of a dozen other ways of dying, any one of which I would have preferred to that, had a choice been possible. The wolf apparently didn't like the hold he had, for he tore out his teeth, and tore out my coat, shirt, and flesh too, and seized on my fur cap. It was a lucky mistake for me. I felt his wet lips on my forehead, and had just time to let go my hold of his throat and clutch my knife, when he shook off my cap and made another attempt to get a mouthful; but his throat was in no fix to swallow it if he got it, for my knife-blade was working desperately across his jugular, and the point of it was feeling between the vertebræ for his spinal marrow. He was a dead wolf, and gave it up like one fairly whipped.

I had bled considerably when I rose, but I wasn't weakened a particle. The whole had passed in less than a minute, and I was ready for the other two, that now came at me both together.

I seized my rifle and met one with barrel across the nose and floored him. As he picked himself up, I seized him by the hind foot. If the first wolf was scared when I fell on him, this one was more so. I shall never forget the howl that escaped him as I swung him into the air and struck the other a blow with the body of his comrades. The other one, the first I had wounded, frightened at the novel fight, vanished in the woods, and I was left with this one in my hands. He seemed to let out his voice with tremendeous force as he went around my head twice. The centrifugal force, as they used to call it at school, forced out his wind, but as I let him fly, his scream was fairly demoniacal.

He went a rod from the bank, and the howl stopped only when he reached the water. I was faint and weak now, and my visit to George was of course out of the question; so I seized my rifle, loaded it with difficulty as I ran, and following the water, I at length saw him come up. He struck for the shore, but seeing me, did not dare to land. I tossed him so for two miles, and each time he approached the shore I showed myself, and he kept off. I saw he was getting tired, but I did'nt want to shoot him yet, so I followed him till over the rapids, and into the deep hole by the Haunted Rock. Here I had to leave the river bank, and as I watched him swimming along the edge of the rock until he found a ledge shelf, on which he crawled out and shook his hide. But he couldn't get up that rock—that was pretty certain: and while he was discussing it all alone by himself, I helped him settle the question with a rifle-ball in his side. He gave a mad half-bark and half-yell, and sprang into the river, but didn't rise again.

How I got to my canoe I don't know. I managed to paddle over and get in here half dead, with my blood all over me, and my wounds frozen dry. It was a month before I was well enough to hunt again, and I have been shy of wolves ever since.

Truth is Strange—Stranger than Fiction.

Under this heading the Long Island Star publishes an interesting tale for the extended details of which, we cannot find room, (says an exchange) but must content ourselves with giving the leading facts, in a condensed form, for the benefit of our readers.

A young grocer of good character and correct habits commences business in a good and improved neighborhood. His stock was small, as were his means, and his stock of customers still smaller. His sales hardly met his expenses, and he was evidently going "down hill," and an old grocer on the opposite corner predicted he would soon be at the bottom.

That the young grocer had reason to regret this opinion of the old grocer will appear. The latter had a daughter, who had won the heart of the former. He offered himself to her, and was rejected. It was done however, with the assurance that he was the man of her choice, but that she acted in obedience to her father's commands.

A year had elapsed, and lo, what a change! The young grocer was now going up hill with the power of a steam locomotive; customers flocked to his store from all quarters, and even many had left the old established stand on the opposite corner, for the younger favorite.—There was a mystery about it which puzzled the old grocer sorely, but which he could not unravel. He at length became nearly sick with the losses and aggravation, and vain attempts to discover the secret of his neighbor's success.

At this juncture, Angelica—for this was the daughter's name—contrived to bring about an apparently accidental interview between the parties. After the old man had become, through the intervention of the daughter, tolerably good humored, he inquired, with great earnestness, of the young man, how he had contrived to effect so much in a single year, and to extend his business and draw off the customers from the older stands.

The young man evaded an answer—but inquired if he had any farther objections to his union with Angelica.

"None," replied he, "provided you reveal the secret of your success."

This the young man promised, when his happiness was made complete. The old man commended his prudence on this point. The affair was settled, and the marrige soon took place.

The friends of the young couple were all assembled, and among them many of the customers of the two stores. Angelica and Thomas looked as happy as well could be, and the old gentleman was, if possible, happier than they. The bridal cake was about to be cut, when the old man called out for "THE SECRET."

"Ayo, the secret," "the secret," exclaimed fifty voices.

"It is a very simple matter," said Thomas, "I advertise!"

The old gentleman was very, very old-fashioned, and while he shook Thomas heartily by the hand, and kissed Angelica fifty times over he muttered; "Why the dickens didn't I think of that!"

The Cold of the Arctic Regions.

Dr. Kane's lectures on the Arctic expedition have been delivered in Baltimore, and are published at length in the Patriot. The following in relation to the cold of the Arctic region will be read with interest.

"The cold came upon the voyagers gradually, and by habit they were enabled to keep as warm as necessary, without fires, for weeks after the thermometer was several degrees below zero. In the second week of September, the water casks froze up, and it became necessary to quarry out the ice and melt it before it could be used. By and by, the waters of the sea congealed around them, and they were glued up in fixed ice. Moisture began to be a rarity, everything being frozen perfectly dry. The opening of a door was followed by a gust of smoke-like vapor, and outside every smoke-pipe exhaled purple steam. All their eatables froze into a mass of laughable solidification. Sugar was soon cut with a saw, butter with a chisel, and beef with an axe and crowbar!

The "crawl," the chill, the sensation of "cold" which at home is a temporary change of state, was here unknown—cold, of a highly wrought intensity, the one unvarying condition! When the mercury froze, alcoholic thermometers fell below 50 degrees or 80 odd below the freezing point, regular inspections took place during and after the walks of the men. A white spot on the nose, lip or cheek, was a signal for a most uncharitable rubbing with snow; and many a time poor Jack, when pining for a warm stove, has been obliged to take, instead, a course of Medical friction, with compulsory exercise.—On one occasion a poor fellow, recovering from an attack of inflamation of the lungs, was asked by his doctor how a certain frostbitten toe came on?

"Why," said he, producing a carefully folded scrap of an old newspaper, "I didn't want to trouble you, doctor; it dropped off last week; here it is."

But the most distressing feature of their Arctic winter was the darkness of its long night, when for eight days the sun was not visible. During this season the Aurora Borealis was an almost nightly visiter. The Aurora of the far North, however, is not the splendid display, either of illumination, or color, or movement, which we see in the more southern latitudes; it resembles a white moonlit cloud, impressed clearly against the pure blue of the sky. Many other interesting phenomena of the Arctic night were described by the lecturer."

A Cure for Duelling.

In Scott nd, lately, two hot-brained youths met in a tavern; and, after much debate concerning a young lady, with whom they were both enamored, nothing would satisfy them but a duel. At parting, one of them told the other to prepare for death. A wag, hearing of the awful threat, and knowing that none of the champions had any courage to spare, went an hour before the appointed time to the place selected and dug a grave; and, sticking his "round mou'd spade" into the red mould, retired behind a bush to behold the scene. The awful moment arrived, and one of the bullies made a fierce appearance; but, on beholding the open grave and the spade ready to cover his corpse, he scratched his head, and, muttering something about being killed, turned round, and in a twinkle was out of sight. Shortly thereafter, the other duellist (?) hove in sight; but on seeing the yawning gulph, his crest fell, and, soliloquizing to himself, was heard, to say, "did he not tell me to prepare for death and, lo! this grave is ready for me. I'll away!" The wag then "shouldered his shovel" and left the scene, which has been visited by many of the curious, determined on seeing the grave of "Johnny Gore."

Political and General News.

The Home of Gen. Houston.

We find in the Hartford (Conn.) Times, a paper that warmly advocates the nomination of Gen. Houston to the Presidency, the following interesting description of the residence of the distinguished Senator from Texas—the Hero of San Jacinto:

CROCKETT, Texas, Jan. 15.

GEN. SAM HOUSTON's home in Texas is about half a mile south of the town of Huntsville, in Walker County. In going out from the town towards his place, you come to a lane, enclosed at the mouth by a large gate. The lane leads directly to his dwelling, and, from the gate, is included in his premises. Fields are on either side of you as you go up the lane. These are used for growing corn and peas. The farm encloses perhaps sixty acres of choice land.—You enter at the end of the lane the yard, which is enclosed with palings, and which is tastily laid out and planted with shrubbery by Mrs. Houston. The house is a double cabin, a story and a half high with a passage in the centre, and an additional room on the south side of each cabin. The roof is made of pine boards, nailed on, as they say in this country, "shingle fashion." The pins are of logs cut down to the thickness of four or five inches. On entering the right hand room from the passage, which is the room for company, you discover on the left hand of the fire-place opposite, a bust of the general in bronze, and back over the door of the entrance, a portrait of Mrs. Houston, painted by Allen; also, on another canvass, a family group, by the same painter, I believe. The furniture is quite plain, though in good taste. It is well set of by many rare and pretty articles presented to the General by his friends, and admirers. Among the curiosities in the room, not the least is the telescope taken from Santa Anna at the battle of San Jacinto. By it, you can stand in the passage and distinguish persons on the public square in the town.

But the chief ornament in the house is the General's amiable and devoted wife. In his absence, (about two-thirds of the time,) she attends to the reception of visitors, and to the hospitalities of the house. All this she does with such natural ease and simplicity that the stranger finds himself not only welcome, but acquainted and at home at once. Finding no ceremony, he sees it is out of place to use any. The open-hearted pioneer rules of the West are used and understood as the most truthful, sincere and convenient. And when through curiosity or friendship you visit the family, it is not expected that you will leave until you have joined in the family meal. When the General is at home he presides at the table, and the meal never commences till the Divine blessing is invoked. This is considered as not only a duty of religion, but as enjoined by good manners. The General reasons thus upon the subject: If a friend make you a present, it would be impolite to withold your thanks. How much more, then, when God is conferring on you his bounty, should you give thanks!

Sam, the only son, is a promising youth about ten years old, and has been deeply impressed by his excellent mother with those high moral truths in which she is so well informed.

The household consists, in addition to the wife and children, of three servants, and a lady who assists Mrs. H. in training the little girls.

Houston is a comfortable liver in this State, but nothing more. The opportunities he has had to become wealthy have been great in this country; but he has not taken advantage of them. His mind has been occupied with one of the greatest undertakings modern times have witnessed. This was nothing less than to snatch from the hands of a tyrant this beautiful country and give it freedom. To this object twenty years of his life have been unceasingly devoted. It has been the subject of his thoughts by day and night—and in the combination of materials, the blending of discordant elements, the patience of intense suffering and indomitable perseverance, he has displayed the highest efforts of genius. In the northeast corner of the yard on the General's premises, he has an office built of hewed logs, in which is laid up the entire documentary history of Texas. Many rare and extraordinary are there whose duplicates are not in the world. These papers will one day see light; it would not do to publish them till this generation passes away. They will present a full, strange and extraordinary history of the inner man of the actors on the stage from 1833 to 1846.

Gen. Houston can turn to any of these papers in a few moments. In fact his memory is such that he will give you with accuracy the contents of any letter or paper he has read or written in twenty years.

Washington Correspondence.

Correspondence of the Cleveland Herald.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.

Major Tochman, the Polish exile, you recollect, married the celebrated Mdlle Jagiello, the Hungarian heroine, who came to this country with Gov. Ujhazi. While in New York, Mdlle Jagiello stopped at the Irving House, and was quite as big a popular lioness as Kossuth is a lion. Gov. Ujhazi went to Iowa, where he and other exiles reside upon lands granted them by our Government, and Mdlle Jagiello married Major Tochman and resides here in Washington. Well, in Iowa, the old Governor, in exile, labors with his own hands, his daughter Clara does all the housework, one table is all he has for the whole family, and they "take turns" in using it for letter writing. In a word, this venerable and exiled Governor, with his family and countrymen have gone to farming, in frontier style, and he wishes and expects that Kossuth and his associates will do so too. But Kossuth, although he can talk pathetically about being "a poor and penniless exile," has no idea of turning farmer, so long as he can traverse the country with a crowd at his heels, and be honored and glorified by the official and clerical dignitaries of the land. It seems that Governor Ujhazi and Mdlle Jagiello had sympathized with the Hungarian cause, and for the Hungarian exiles, and Major Tochman and his lady called upon Kossuth, family and suite while here, but were treated very indifferently—so much so, that the Major wrote him a letter, in which he refers to his wife's services, and the friendship of Gov. Ujhazi. Kossuth, finally answers the letter, in his Secretary's name, and in it talks about "Mr. Ujhazi," and in return for the services of Maj. Tochman, the letter very condescendingly says that "Gov. Kossuth" would be "highly gratified to meet with an opportunity consistent with his position," to prove to "Mr. Tochman" his gratitude.

I refer to this simply to show the ridiculous airs and pretensions of this "poor exile"—that while he is discoursing eloquently to admiring thousands about democracy, his poor down trodden country, and his humble self, it is not "consistent with his position" to notice the favors and services of Gov. Ujhazi and Major Tochman give in a formal note through his Secretary to Mr. Ujhazi and Mr. Tochman.—"Straws show which way the current runs," and these incidents, connected with his courtly surroundings, demonstrate that Kossuth, notwithstanding his eminent genius, is really a transcendental enthusiast—an oriental aristocrat; as regards his practical democracy, and notions of "equality and fraternity."

NOBLY DONE.—Dr. A. H. Wilder failed in business in Northampton, Mass. His liabilities did not exceeed $2,000, but they were more than a poor man could meet. A few months ago, penniless and bankrupt—having surrendered all his effects to his creditors—he went to California, leaving his wife and family behind him to earn their own bread.—This they did cheerfully, conscious that their absent protector was worthy of their confidence and co-operation. A few days ago he sent $1,500 to Northampton, which, with what his family had saved, was sufficient to pay off his debts. The creditors met around a well provided supper table, and each found the amount due him under his plate.—The Doctor did not wait until he got rich before paying off his debts, but appropriated every farthing as he earned it. His creditors properly set apart $100 to purchase some suitable testimonial to be presented to the wife of the honest man.

"SUCH IS LIFE."—A half drunken woman was perambulating the streets of Cincinnati on Thursday night. A rowdy led her into a paint shop on Fifth street, and daubed her face in mere blackguard wantonness, and then took her into a back room where there was a light. The light disclosed the disfigured face of his own mother.

A FELLOW, seven feet high, passed through Charleston on his way to California. On being asked why he ventured upon so hazardous a journey, he replied that they didn't want him any longer down in Maine!

Erie Weekly Observer.

ERIE, PA.

SATURDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 28, 1852.

RAIL ROAD MEETING.

A meeting of the people of Erie and of the County generally will be held at the Court House, this, (Saturday) evening, to take into consideration the schemes now on foot in the Legislature in relation to the Western Railroad. A general attendance is desired.

☞ OPEN.—The road from here to Buffalo is now open, and trains arrive and depart from here every day for that city. The time between the two points is about four hours, which, however will be considerably diminished when the road becomes settled and smooth.

Conferees Meeting.

It will be seen by the proceedings of the Conferees Meeting, held at Edenboro on Saturday last, that some difficulty occurred in electing a Senatorial delegate to the 4th of March Convention. This unfortunate state of affairs grows out of the arrogant pretentions of Crawford county—she not only claiming the delegate, but also the preposterous right of instructing him over the heads of the Democracy of Erie. That we may not be accused of misrepresentation in this particular, we quote from the proceedings of the County meeting in Crawford:

On motion, Wm. McArthur was recommended as the Senatorial Delegate from Crawford and Erie counties, with instructions to support the Hon. James Buchanan for President.

On motion, Nicholas Snyder, D. V. Derickson, and E. A. Tinney, were chosen Conferees to meet those from Erie county, to select a Senatorial Delegate, with instructions to support Wm. McArthur for Senatorial Delegate, and the Hon. James Buchanan for President.

Now, the above means, if it means any thing, that Mr. McArthur was to support Mr. Buchannan whether Erie county agreed to it or not. Erie county could not agree to it. Her conferees considered that a Senatorial Delegate should be one who could, unfettered, represent both counties, and as the gentleman presented by Crawford county was bound up by the above resolutions to represent her views alone, they could not vote for him.—They, however, for the sake of harmony, offered to concur in his election, if the Conferees from Crawford would vote for a resolution withdrawing the instructions. This they refused to do, and finally left the meeting. What they did afterwards, we know nothing, except by report. It is said, however, they re-organized in another room and then succeeding in electing Mr. McArthur without taking off his Buchanan coat. Under such circumstances, whether he will pretend to claim his seat we are not advised.

Still at It.

Not satisfied with the rebuke administered by the people last fall to the miserable faction here in town, for their opposition and war upon the Western railroad, the representative of that faction in Harrisburg, Mr. Speaker Walker, we understand, is still engaged in an effort to procure legislation for the purpose of preventing or retarding the construction of that road. What the exact nature of the effort now making by this doubly rebuked official is, we are not definitely advised. We hear, however, that the "snake" is concealed in a bill giving the Supreme Court of the State extended powers over railroad corporations, or something of that sort. At any rate, this recreant Senator is still warring upon the road, and consequently upon the interests of Erie. We were really in hopes we were done with this matter. The people had spoken, and had decided in favor of the road. The road itself is in a good state of forwardness—so much so, that the managers confidently expect to have the cars upon a good portion of it early in the summer. This, however, will not be the case if the work is to be arrested by this kind of "snake" legislation, and that too, to gratify the spleen of our Senator and his few adherents in Erie.—Perhaps it might be well enough for the Western part of the county to let its voice be heard again. It had a powerful inflence last winter.

☞ OF COURSE.—The Gazette is out with a manifesto, urging the faithful to carry their party feelings into the municipal election. This was to be expected—there is nobody pays taxes or is interested in the improvement of the town, but the Whigs, hence none but that party should be elected to municipal offices. Stand back, ye miserable "Lo-co-fo-cos" and Bogus Whigs, and make room for the "Market-house clique."

Just our Luck.

We really begin to believe we are the most unlucky Editor in the State. Last week we had not fairly recovered from a broadside from the over charged goose-quill of the Crawford Democrat, ere we discovered a ponderous leader, in that "leading paper in Western Pennsylvania," "The Pittsburg Post," devoted exclusively to our benefit. The Post complains of us because we said, in reply to a charge that we had carefully kept from our readers the complexion of the 4th of March Convention, that we did not know we were under obligations to give currency to the speculations of this Post, and some other papers we named. The Post wants to know "who ever asked us to learn we were under such obligations," and replies, "certainly not the Pittsburg Post." We respond, "certainly not." If it had, it would have, most probably, received a just rebuff. It was gentlemen who worship at the shrine of "Wheatland," preach from the Pennsylvanian, sing anthems from the Democratic Union, and try to pry "iron out of politics" with the Post. So much on that point. But the Post says further;

"We have known the Observer for many years, and always thought it an honest and fair democratic journal, willing at all times to advocate pure and true democracy, and never inclined to coalesce with those who wish to disorganize the party. But the editor has lately fallen into strange ways, and now appears more desirous to annoy the party than to further the warm desires of our State, and in its cross temper, it seems to have a peculiar spite against the Post."

It is not many months since the Post stigmatized the Observer, and without cause, as a "professedly democratic sheet," and when rebuked for its unwarrantable slur, it stubbornly kept silent. Now, it "always thought it an honest and fair democratic sheet." The Post has a sad memory—it forgets its libels as soon as it utters them, and in its zeal for the "favorite son," appears to look upon every body that does not train under its Captain as a "disorganizer;" and "more desirous to annoy the party than to further the warm desires of our State." The true meaning of which is, that all those who prefer some other man than the Post's man, Mr. Buchanan, are neither true Democrats, nor true Pennsylvanians. When we shall be convinced that Mr. Buchanan can carry Pennsylvania—when it can be shown to our satisfaction that the Presidency is the heirship of Pennsylvania, and that there are not just as good, sound Democrats out of the State as in it, then it will be of some use for the Post to lecture us about not "furthering the warm desires of our State." In the mean time, we beg leave to go for who we please for the Presidency, and to reply to our own correspondents as to us seems best.

☞ The Fredonia Censor is to be enlarged and printed on a power press. The Censor is a good paper, baring the curl of its political hair, and we rejoice to know it is highly prosperous.

☞ We have the March number of the "Western Literary Messenger" upon our table. This number commences the volume, and the present time affords a good opportunity to subscribe for it. It is really one of the most readible cheap magazines in the country. Jewett, Thomas & Co., publishers, Buffalo J. Clement, Editor,—Price, $1 50.

☞ A WARNING.—With the Oswego Palladium, we differ with most editors with regard to borrowing newspapers. We prefer that a man should borrow a newspaper, and read it, rather than not read at all, and grow up like a cabbage, in ignorance. Still, newspaper borrowing is sometimes attended with sad consequences, as will be seen by the following from the Boston Post:

"The death of Simeon Stevens, Esq., a respectable citizen of Newbury, N. H., was caused by a newspaper, which he had borrowed and was carrying home, when the wind took it away. He chased it through the drifted snow, and died of fatigue soon after recovering it."

Trouble among the Whigs.

The whigs everywhere have chuckled a good deal over the intestine feuds in this State among the Democracy, and they no doubt sincerely hope that either Buchanan or Cass will be the nominee at Baltimore;—in which case, they argue, and with much reason too, the breach will be so deep that they will be enabled to obtain an easy victory. We are well convinced that in this hope they will be disappointed. The Baltimore convention will be composed of men of reason and discernment, and they must see that, to render victory certain, the vote of Pennsylvania is essential; and this cannot be obtained, under the present exasperated state of feeling, if either of the gentlemen named is nominated. Hence the Democracy will be called upon to unite their strength upon a new man—unexceptionable alike to the friends of Cass or Buchanan. Now, while this result is plainly discernible to every reader of the political signs of the times, how stands the account among the whigs? Have they no intestine feuds to heal? Are there no clouds in their horizon? We shall see! Tennessee has already instructed for Mr. Fillmore, and it is evident that is but the forerunner of what will be done in every other Southern State. The whig politicians and the whig press of the South, with marked unanimity, have declared for the re-election of the President. This, in itself, might not be indicative of any thing that would militate against the harmony of the party; but these expressions of preference are accompanied by words and acts of hostility to the nomination of Gen. Scott, that cannot but exasperate his friends at the North, and particularly in New York, where his greatest strength lies. As a natural sequence these indications at the South draw out counter indications, and we find some of the papers in New York peculiarly savage upon Mr. Fillmore. The Buffalo Express, for instance, a paper of commanding influence, published in the President's own city, and Edited by his neighbors, talks in this wise:

"Those who make public opinion for Mr. Fillmore, have for the two years past—by the free use and abuse of the Washington correspondence, bamboozled the public with the notion, that Mr. Fillmore was not a candidate for the Presidential nomination. Those who know his and their methods of political action, know better; but the mass of the people take to be true what is promulgated by those whose veracity ought not to be questionable. This state of things, so adroitly kept up, imposed silence and inaction as to this question, upon those who knew the fatal consequences to the party, of the nomination of Mr. Fillmore. The time came, however, when he was compelled to "break cover." When the friends of Mr. Webster, acting upon an impression which had been made upon them, by the words and acts of Mr. Fillmore, called on him definitely, over his own signature, to withdraw his own name from the canvass—he refused; and the delusion under which they and the public had labored, was dispelled. Mr. Fillmore now, for the first time, stands before the public, and confessedly, a candidate for the nomination, and therefore, now his political character and position, are proper subjects of scrutiny and remark, by whigs everywhere, and by all whig journals. In no other way can the judgment and opinions of the party be matured and ascertained. In no other way could the aspirants to the nomination stand a ghost of a chance in competition with Mr. Fillmore, for while their friends were inactive and their organs silent—forty thousand office holders, and some score or two of newspapers, enjoying the benefit of access to the public treasury, were active and earnest in advancing the fortunes of Mr. Fillmore. We cannot we think, be mistaken in the opinion, that the nomination of Mr. Fillmore, would bring defeat swift, certain and merited on the whig party."

As to the Express' idea of "merited" defeat, if Mr Fillmore should be the candidate, we think there is no question; and such, we think, will also be the case let who will be the lucky man. But the Express is not alone in its idea of "merited" defeat. The Auburn Daily Advertiser, Gov. Seward's home organ—significantly asks the following question:

"Should Mr. Fillmore receive the nomination of the Whig Convention, would this State give less than fifty thousand majority against him?"

In reply to the above, the Rochester American, an Administration whig organ, says:

"There can be no doubt from the above and similar intimations, that the answer to the Advertiser's question would depend upon the number who could be induced to bolt the nomination of the Whig National Convention, by that paper and those with whom it acts.

We have a question to ask. Should those who threaten to bolt the nomination of the National Convention be represented in that body?"

From the above samples of harmonious whiggery, we think our readers will agree with us, that before the whigs chuckle over the feuds of the Cass and Buchanan men in Pennsylvania, they had better set their own house in order.

"Be Just before you are Generous."

Newspaper Editors see some queer freaks in human nature; especially that kind of human nature which seeks notoriety at the expense of honor. The Pennsylvanian relates a notable instance in the case of a subscriber to that paper. It says: "We see amongst those gazetted as having contributed largely to the Kossuth fund, the name of a gentleman who stands indebted on our books for some four years' subscription. The person referred to has the reputation of a generous, whole-souled clever fellow—and we believe he is; but for all that, we could not help thinking, that if a portion of the check so ostentatiously handed over to the "Kossuth Fund" had been appropriated to the debt so long standing, the donor would have stood a little higher in our estimation as a just, as well as generous man." This is a pretty good sample, we suspect, of the general character of the material out of which this Kossuth furor is manufactured.

☞ Gen. Rusk, one of the ablest and best men in the Senate, is out with a letter to the Hartford Times, declaring himself favorable to Gen. Houston's nomination by the Baltimore Convention. He says:

"In thus expressing an honest preference for Gen H. I have no wish to derogate from the claims of other gentlemen, but simply to state the appreciation in which I hold a friend whom I have known intimately for seventeen years past in stations of high responsibility, which he has filled with an intelligence and devotion to the public service calculated to inspire me with entire confidence in his capacity and patriotism. I will further remark that, if nominated, Gen. Houston would in my opinion be more acceptable to the people throughout the Union than any other person whom we can select; and, if elected, I have full confidence he would administer the government in strict conformity with the principles laid down in the constitution."

☞ The New Orleans Delta says that Mr. Clay wrote a warm letter in favor of Gen. Downs, his colleague in the compromise, advising his whig friends to re-elect him Senator, declaring if he was a Louisianian he would do so. This letter fell still-born—it did not gain Gen. Downs a single vote. The voice which was once omnipotent with the whig party could not stir up a single sensation of gratitude and concession in that party.

☞ LEAP YEAR PRIVILEGES.—The Cincinnati Gazette notices the fact that the ladies of Chagrin Falls have subscribed some $2,500 in single shares to the stock of the Cleveland and Mahoning Railroad, as a "new feature," and speaks of it as "a leap year movement, that evinces an energy not to be intimidated by ordinary obstacles, which will be followed with a perseverance not to be satisfied with any thing short of complete success."

☞ GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK.—The March number of the Lady's Book is a superior one, especially in its engravings. The two principal illustrations—"The Cottager's Sunday Morning," and "The Soldier's Dream of Home"—are beautiful pictures. The "Model Cottages," and the other illustrations are to be found in its pages, as usual. The contributors are the best in the land, as every one knows who has read this Magazine. For sale at the cheap Book Store, No. 5, State street.

☞ Hon. Howell Cobb, Governor of Georgia, has ordered the Webster paper at Boston to take down his name as Vice President on the Webster ticket. The order has been complied with.

☞ Judge Strickland, of the West-Chester Republican, in noticing the election of Houston delegates in this county, remarks:

"Erie county has elected her delegates and instructed them for Gen. Houston. It is some gratification to know that one county in Pennsylvania, has declared for a candidate, about whose success, if nominated, there would be no doubt. Would that all had done ditto."

☞ The Pittsburgh Saturday Visiter rejoices in a new dress, a new volume, and a new head. Success to the Visiter—it is independent and fearless, saucy, sprightly and caustic; all for $1 50 per year.

First Impressions of California.

Correspondence of the Erie Observer.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3, 1852.

DEAR FRANK:—In my last I told you, and your readers of my safe arrival, in spite of contrary winds and still more contrary calms, in this modern Babel. Let me give you an inkling of my first days experience in the Empire City of the Pacific. All hands were in the act of cousing the anchor over the bow when our good ship was boarded by two or three newsmongers—reporters for the different papers in the city. Upon the heels of these came the Custom House and Health Officers, and then a half-dozen small boats, whose proprietors informed me they were the licensed watermen of the harbor.—As the ship's boat was not permitted to carry passengers ashore, I jumped into the stern sheets of the "Sally Jane," and, reclining upon her cushioned-seat, was soon skimming across the bay. Steamers land at regular wharves, but sailing vessels are not permitted to approach the shore until the harbor-master has assigned them a "berth."—It was not long before we entered a perfect forest of shipping, amounting to, steam and sail vessels included, two hundred sail. This includes only those that ply upon the ocean. Some of these sailing crafts were, I think, the most graceful specimens of marine architecture I ever set eyes upon. My friend of the aforesaid "Sally," informed me, however, that nothing before me would compare with a clipper ship that had recently left port—the "Challenge." The good fellow went into perfect ecstacies in describing her. Drawing near the landing point, we became entangled with the river and harbor shipping. These form, in themselves, a respectable fleet. Six or seven steamers leave here daily for river and Bay towns, and the white sail of little thirty and forty ton crafts are constantly seen flitting up and down.—Of this class, I noticed many with their bills out, soliciting freight for San Jose, Benicia, Vallejo, Sonoma, San Pueblo, Santa Clara, San Rafael, and others for Sutter's Fort, Sacramento and Stockton. They carry lumber and other stores to these towns, and return laden with fat cattle and the finest vegetables in the world, for the supply of the San Francisco market. Finally we succeeded in landing, but we were not yet on "terra firma;" the city in this direction, for some three squares, being built on stilts, with the sea rolling under the houses for the most part. Great hulks used as store ships lay along the wooden streets, or were jamed among the houses; and two months ago it cost just three dollars to get a waterman to carry you from the shore to the point I landed at. No officious porter proffered his services to carry our baggage; we were not troubled with runners asking our custom at hotels and boarding houses; times were too good, or else we looked too shabby, for that.—It was about eleven in the morning; and along these wharves came streaming the great democracy—the people; whilst carts, drays and carriages rushed through the masses with a most life-endangering velocity. Every soul seemed doubly bent upon its own particular errand, as leaning forward the mind seemed but ill content with the tardy movement of the legs. A motley crew they are too; first you see the smart city gent from Broadway, N. Y., and then the homespun representative of "hoosier" or "suckerdom," then the swarthy descendant of old Spain, now a Chinaman, then a cumbrous Dutchman or Sandwich Islander, a Lascar or African. There they were of every color and shade, and from every corner of the inhabitable globe—such a checkered mass, and such a medley of languages—'twas Babel without its terror and confusion. The shops were all open, but the proprietors seemed quite as independent as the customers, and it was only when you passed some auction house, that you were invited to "roll up, tumble up" and make a purchase. Every shop, and even some of the cake-stands outside, were provided with a pair of scales, where occasionally you might observe them deliberating over a wallet of the dust. Liquor shops are as plenty as blackbirds in a newly planted cornfield, some of them flashy affairs, but look wild for your dimes,—four sucks at a julep, and your dollar is "no whar." As you advance into the region of the Plaza, you find yourself in the midst of banking-houses, rich restaurants, fashionable jewelry and dry good shops, and the great hotels and gambling saloons. The latter the great focus of attraction, and are worth seeing. They are not now what they "used to was," having been despoiled of their glory in the "last fire." But suppose we step into one of them; there are a dozen of them, any one will do, as they are, to a great extent, fac similes of each other. Ah, how gorgeously they are fitted up; the light from twenty mirrors, in golden gilt, flashes upon you; rich paintings adorn the walls, in which female grace in its native truth, invites the enamored gaze; a spacious bar with its glittering array of cut-glass occupies one side of the room, its extent, say eighty feet, whilst costly chandaliers are suspended in bright constellations from above. The house is crowded, but we can count a dozen tables each with its busy cluster of players. Mark that fashionably dressed mustached gentlemen, whose soft white hand, heavily ladened with massive "specimen rings," moves the cards so dextrously—isn't he a fine looking fellow? and so pleasantly calm withal, and yet before him upon his table are quarries of silver and piles of gold, all of which he is risking every hour of the day. There too is a handsome female, "dressed to death," gaily laughing with her customers as her delicate fingers nimbly cast the dice. Another fair dame would "take you down" at farro, only give her a bet, and so on. "Are you all set?" quoth the impatient banker, and fast whirls the roulet. Around one large table the lazy sportsmen are each provided with a small ivory rake, the better to facilitate the putting up or calling in of the coin, as the fortune of the deal shall decide. In the rear or adjacent and attached to the building, is the "ten pin" alley and billiard room. At the extreme end of the saloon, upon a raised platform, with their music before them, sits the orchestra of the establishment, and the ravishing notes of the last new opera, come thrilling upon the ear. Softly melts upon the senses the notes of the French horn and bass-viol, the jingle of coin, the merry music of the woman's prattle, and the exhilerating potion you have taken at the bar; beware my verdant friend from the mines, your pile is in danger. You notice very few drunken men here, they've no time to liquor up, their motto being always "business before pleasure." Among the hotels, (and there are many, and some quite fine,) "Jones," the "St. Charles" the "Oriental" and the "Union" stand most prominent.—The latter I found to be a kind of political head-quarters for the California politicians. Crowds of this hungry genus were conversing in knots throughout the drinking, eating and billiard rooms. The State legislature is about going into session, and many of them I find are quite desirous of "doing the State some service" In the vicinity of the Plaza, I found the boot-black stands. They are driving a brisk business just now, the streets being quite muddy. The news-boys here are not a whit behind their class in other cities; in fact I should think them even with California. Listen to one of them—"here's your 'Alta Californian,' with all the news by the last steamer, a full account of the meeting of the legislature, and the trial of Capt. Waterman. Won't you buy it, say, G—d d—n you?" Ain't they polite lads?—importations from the Island of Sidney and other points where morals are held in high repute. I overheard the proprietor of a bowling alley trying to employ a couple of this class of "gents" in his establishment. Sixteen dollars per week was offered, but the "b'hoys" gave the lighted end of their cigars an upward cant, a-la-"Mose," and gave him to understand that "they'd see him d—d afore they'd set a pin for less than eighteen slugs." As night closed, these fancy shops and luxurious saloons cast a dazzling blaze of light upon the promenader; the auctioneers grow furious, the news-boys stike a note higher, the crowd seems to thicken in the streets—but clear the track, here comes a horseman at full gallop,—"Oh yes, boys come to the 'Jenny Lind' to-night and see Rob Roy played, the great Scotch patriot," and the crowd are scarcely relieved from their astonishment, when along comes another shouting "ho for the American and Richard, the third," and yet another proclaims the virtues of the "Nigger Minstrels," where "you'r sure to get the worth of your money—only three dollars admittance." Of the four theatres in the city, none for me was equal to the scenes enacting in the open streets. San Francisco is too fast for brick and morter; it's a wooden town, with wooden streets, great squares rise in a week, and are devoured by the flames in an hour.

I have not gone into any description of the city generally, and for the simple reason that, like a very crooked stick I once heard of, it would'nt lay still long enough to bear description. On five different occasions it has risen, phœnix-like, from its ashes. Habits and morals, however, are of much slower growth than houses. But to conclude, I had seen the sights "about town," delivered some letters of introduction, (the Lord forgive me if ever I give pocket room to any more, especially in California,) and thoroughly sick and tired out with the noise and hubbub in the streets, retired to rest. 'Twas late, however, before the crowd left the streets, and then I dozed a little, and then I fought the fleas, and then I was startled with the appalling cry of fire! and then everybody got up, made a fuss and looked forth from the window and then I heard the "machine" return to the engine house, and again I slept. And thus closed my first day in California. Mr. Editor, I don't know but I have been booring you with "an oft repeated tale," but this I do know, devil the lie is in it. OMEGO.

Conferees Meeting.

In pursuance of agreement between the Conferees of this Senatorial district, the gentlemen respectively appointed by the two Counties composing it, met at the village of Edinboro, Erie County, on Saturday, the 21st inst. The meeting was organized by calling E. W. GERRISH, Esq., of Erie County, to the chair, and appointing D. V. DERICKSON, Crawford, Secretary. Thomas Coulter appeared and took his seat, vice Nicholas Snyder, of Crawford, who was unable to attend. I. R. Taylor of Erie, was admitted to a seat, vice Harley Sherman not present at the organization. Mr. S., however, soon after arrived, and was admitted and his substitute withdrew.

Mr. Sloan, of Erie, said he was authorized by his colleagues to say that they were willing to give Crawford the Senatorial delegate, provided they presented one, or would agree to the selection of one, not already bound up with instructions, to which Erie County could never agree; he, therefore, nominated Wilmot Bartle, of Meadville.

D. V. Derickson, replied that Crawford County not only claimed the delegate, but she claimed the right to instruct said delegate; he, therefore, nominated William McArthur.

Several ballotings were then had, but in every case there was a tie.

The Conferees from Erie named several gentlemen in Crawford as a compromise, but the Conferees from Crawford sternly refused to vote for any one but the gentleman they had named; threatning in the mean time to withdraw unless the Conferees from Erie would vote for McArthur.

The Conferees from Erie replied that they could not do that as long as Mr. McArthur was tied up by his instructions, but that if they, the Crawford Conferees, would vote for a resolution revoking those instruction, they would cheerfully vote for Mr. McArthur.

This, the Conferees of Crawford, refused to do, and finally carried out their threat of withdrawing.

On moton of Mr. Sherman, B. F. Sloan was appointed Secretary, vice Mr. Derickson, withdrawn, and then, on motion, M. B. Lowry, Esq., of Erie, was unanimously appointed Senatorial delegate to the 4th of March Convention.

On motion the proceedings of the meeting was signed by the officers and published.

B. F. SLOAN, Sec. E. W. GERRISH, Prest.

☞ PENNSYLVANIA INSANE HOSPITAL.—The Annual Report of the Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane, states that during the year 1851 there were 204 patients admitted into the Hospital, and 201 discharged. Of these 107 were discharged cured; 13 much improved; 32 improved; 23 stationary; and 26 died. With the commencement of the last year there were 213 patients; consequently 216 remained on the 1st of January, 1852. The highest number of patients at any one time during the year, was 243; the lowest 205, and the average 223; Two persons who died during the year had been residents of the Insane Hospital for thirty-six years; one for twenty-five years, and eight died before a fortnight after their admission. The report represents the farm and garden to be in a high state of cultivation, and states that 400 pounds of native grapes were produced from the vines in the garden last summer, and used in the Hospital. The introduction of libraries into the several wards since the last report has resulted in far greater usefulness than was at first anticipated, and the computation is, that four times as much reading is done by the inmates as before. The receipts of the institution for the year were $45,803 92; expenditures, $46 002 91.

☞ IN FAVOR OF THE MAINE LIQUOR LAW.—"Do dogs reason?" is the title of an amusing paragraph in a New Hampshire paper. A dog, it appears, which was confined in a yard where stood a barrel of cider, "deliberately drew the tap, and in spite of the efforts of its mistress to the contrary, refused to give it up, until the contents of the aforesaid cask were essentially curtailed, and the cider very much in the condition of 'water spilt upon the ground, which cannot be gathered up.' That pup deserves a medal for its con-sider-ation. Were men to take the tap in their mouths, instead of the cider, they would then be as wise as the pup, and much more harmless, happy and reasonable than they now are." So speaks the Home Journal.

☞ Sartin's Magazine for March has a caustic review of N. P. Willis and his poetry. The author thinks that if the "gods had so loved" Willis as to have caused him to "die young," he would have an "unchallenged claim to poetic immortality." Not very complimentary to Willis' more mature efforts, but perhaps just. At any rate the Magazine can be had at the Cheap Book Store, State street.

☞ THAT IS SO.—The Louisville Democrat, the organ of the Democracy of Kentucky, says: "In our position, in sight of such an enemy, we might just as well lay aside the ridiculous notion we have heard so often expressed, that the Democratic party can nominate any man it pleases, and be sure of his election. We must have an available man, and the very strongest that can be put in the field."

☞ JAMESTOWN CONVENTION.—The Railroad Convention at Jamestown on the 20th inst., was numerously attended. Judge Chamberlain, of Randolph, presided, assisted by a competent number of Vice Presidents and Secretaries. The best possible feeling prevailed, and resolutions were adopted expressive of a stern purpose to consummate the important project the Convention had assembled to consider, viz:—the construction of the Little Valley Railroad. In response to a pledge from Wililam Kelley, Esq., of this city, of cordial co-operation on the part of the Erie and North-East Company and Erie County, confident assurances were communicated both of the ability and determination of the parties more particularly interested to build the Road. Awaiting the receipt of the proceedings in an official form, we content ourselves with this brief notice, giving it as our sincere belief, soundly predicated, that operations will be commenced next Spring, and when commenced, be prosecuted to rapid completion.—Gazette.

☞ GRAHAM'S MAGAZINE.—This sterling periodical comes to us with 112 pages, pledged for each number during the year. In matter this book ranks above all other of the Philadelphia monthlies, and the March number sparkles with the choicest gems from the pens of eminent American writers. A capital line and stipple engraving entitled "Beauty's Retreat," by ILLMAN, is at work of merit, and the "Dacotah Indian Country"—a mezzotint—is happily designed. For sale at the Cheap Book Store, No. 5 State Street.

MAN'S WEAK PART.—In the course of a book lately published at New York, entitled the "Reveries of an Old Maid," we are told that the weapons to subdue man are not to be found in the library, but in the kitchen! "The weakest part of the alligator is his stomach. Man is an alligator. Let the young wife fascinate her husband with the teapot! Let her so to speak, only bring him into habits of intoxication with that sweet charmer, and make honey-suckles clamber up his chair back and grow up the legs of his table, let the hearth rug be a bed of heart's ease for the feet in slippers, and the wickedness of the natural enemy must die within him." What excellent wives some of these old maids who write books would make?

A NEW PRODUCTION.—The adage, that "necessity is the mother of invention," has been verified, to some purpose, in Massachusetts. The Journal of Commerce gives an account of a novel production which the Bay State mills—those which recently drove the British shawls out of the market—have produced. It is a felt cloth carpet, printed in black work, and designed according to weight either as a floor-cloth or drugget. The threads of wool are not spun or woven, but drawn out and laid together, the whole mass being felted like a hat body. Within a few months, fabrics have been put together in this way, showing a different color on either side, and designed for coats to be made up without lining. The Bay State mills make this cloth with a white ground, about 44 inches wide, weighing 4 to 24 ozs. per yard, and print it in elegant carpet designs, showing the richest combination of brilliant colors, and furnish it at 75 to 90 cents per yard. Already the carpet-bag makers are ordering extensively for their own use—and for the floor of a drawing-room or chamber there is no covering so cheap, at all comparable with it for appearance or comfort. The Bay State mills, the Journal says, have been driven to invent something new by the home competition in the shawl trade.

MURDER MOST HORRIBLE—A FIEND IN HUMAN SHAPE.—The Pottsville (Pa.) Journal says a shocking murder was committed by a man named Cavenaugh, at Patterson's Saw Mill, near Minersville, in Schuylkill county, on Tuesday night last. The circumstances of this horrible affair were as follows:—Cavenaugh became jealous of his wife.—Having quarrelled with her on Tuesday night, he took one of their children, a fine boy of about three years old, the fruit of her faithlessness, as he charges, for the purpose of killing it. He forced its face into a blazing fire on the hearth—his wife remonstrating and using her best efforts to seize the boy, he stabbed her several times, then placed the child's head in the fire and burned it to death! The woman fled to a neighbor's, who procured the assistance of a constable from Minersville, and immediately proceeded to arrest Cavenaugh. On approaching the door, they found it closed, and Cavenaugh, on the inside, refused to admit them. On breaking it open, they discovered him perfectly naked and the child in bed beside another living one, where he had placed it.

He made no resistance—they accordingly took him before a justice of the peace in Minersville, who committed him for trial and he was forthwith taken to Orwigsburg. He is about 27 years of age—has been married for six years, and has several children. The woman still lingers.

MYSTERIOUS.—A letter in the Richmond (Va.) Times states that a few days ago, while several men were engaged in blasting out limestone, near Bichanan, Botetcourt county, they discovered a cave, with an entrance of some six or eight feet in height, and upwards of one hundred long, with two apartments. In the first they found some earthen-ware and a large stone cross; on the cross there was some carving, but it was so much defaced by the hand of time that it was scarcely discernable. A number of citizens, with a lantern, subsequently entered the second apartment, where they found a skelton seated on a huge iron chest, with its back resting against the wall. On opening this chest they found it to contain gold coin, perfectly smooth on one side, and a cross with some characters on it, on the other.—The gold in the chest, by weight, is worth seven hundred and eighty-three dollars.

ERIE & LITTLE VALLEY RAILROAD.—A large and enthusiastic meeting was held at Jamestown last week to take measures for the furtherance of this project. A large delegation was present, and the most sanguine expectations are entertained of its construction. The people of Erie propose to connect it with the Erie & North East road at the latter place and to construct it to the State Line which will be some four or five miles. We are informed that about $175,000 of stock have been taken.—Fredonia Censor.

A PATRIARCH.—There is now living in Waldoboro, Me., an old gentleman named Conrand Hyer, a hero of the American Revolution, who will be one hundred and three years old on the 10th of April next, if he lives until that time. He entered the army at the age of 25, and served for three years. He belonged to Col. Bond's regiment, and was at the taking of Ticonteroga and the surrender of Burgoyne.

The Canal Board has resolved to open the Canals on the 12th of March.

The Joint Resolution against the removal of the U. S. Mint from Philadelphia, passed the Senate this morning.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 25.

Hon. Ethan Allen Brown, who had acted yesterday, as one of the Vice Presidents of the Democratic State Convention, died on reaching his hotel, without a struggle.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.

The Committee of Ways and Means have resolved to report the New York Branch Mint bill complete.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—7, P. M.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 23.

The deposites at the Mint the past week, were $1,282,000. Coinage $857,000, Payments $877,000

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.

John Florence, senior proprietor of the City Hotel, attempted to cut his throat yesterday afternoon, while in a fit of temporary insanity. It is thought he will not survive.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.

Senator Cooper has recovered from his recent attack of vertigo, and resumed his seat. Stephen A. Duncan, Union democrat, is elected U. S. Senator from Mississippi, to fill the unexpired term of Jefferson Davis, now filled by Mr. McRae.

HALIFAX, Feb. 21.

The Royal Mail Steamship "Cambria" arrived here at half past 3, this P. M., having encountered severe gales during the entire passage. She left Liverpool at noon, on the 7th inst., and her news is therefore one week later than the Canada's.

The commercial news by this arrival, is of great importance, while politically, the news is of but little interest. Cotton heavy and without animation. In Breadstuffs there was only moderate demand, and the late buoyancy had been lost. Holders of Wheat and Flour had been asking full prices, but buyers were not disposed to operate, except at a concession, which had been acceeded to in several instances.

Western Canal Flour was selling at 22s 9da23s—Canadian 22s 6da22s 9d.

Sales of American White Wheat at 6s 6da7s, mixed 6s 2da6s 6d.

Indian Corn in slow demand—prices ruled in favor of buyers—some considerable sales of yellow had been made at 29sa30s and white at 32sa33s.

The London money market has exhibited great buoyancy and the tendency was to still lower rates. Discounts were readily obtained at 2¼a2½ per cent.

There was more inquiry for American securities and prices ruled higher.

The British Parliament was opened by the Queen in person, on the 3d. Her Majesty in her speech says, all relations are of the most friendly character. In the House of Commons, Lord John Russel assigned as one of the causes of Lord Palmerston's resignation, that Lord P. had openly approved of the late illegal coup d'etat of Louis Napoleon. In the course of his speech, Lord John highly complimented Mr. Lawrence, the American Minister.

Louis Napoleon's disavowal of warlike intentions, had quieted the public mind.

France remains nominally tranquil. Protests against the acts of Louis Napoleon relative to the Orleans family, had continued to pour in. The Funds were firm.

From other parts of Europe, there was nothing of striking importance.

An unsuccessful attempt had been made to assassinate the Queen of Spain.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.

The Government offices are all closed, and the Day is very generally observed in honor of the birth of Washington. The Departments met as usual to day, but the President ordered that all business be suspended.

The Congressional Banquet at Willard's Hotel, in honor of the birth-day of Washington, was the strongest demonstration against the Kossuth doctrine yet made.—Senator Stockton presided, supported by Messrs. Venable, Taylor of Ohio, Gen. Scott, Judge Wayne and others.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24—2 P. M.

Niblo's large Theatre was densely crowded last night chiefly by members of the N. Y. Historical Society, on the occasion of the 48th aniversary of that institution, to hear the address of Daniel Webster. On the stage were the officers and distinguished members of the Society—Washington Irving, George Bancroft, Luther Bradish, Dr. Dewit, Dr. Hawks, and many others. Fully an hour before the time appointed every seat was filled and the lobbies and halls were densely crowded. Mr. Webster occupied two hours and a quarter in reading his discourse. It was somewhat different, in many respects, from any paper he has hitherto given to the public. It was a masterly production. He was received with enthusiastic applause.

To-day Mr. W. received his friends in the Governor's room at the City Hall. In the evening he will be the guest of Mayor Kingsland.

BOSTON, Feb. 23.

Martin Converse, Worcester; J. B. Hughes, New Orleans, and E. B. Hough of Indiana, Cuban prisioners arrived to day, from Malaya, in the brig "Oak."

Two more arrests have been made in the case of plundering the Bark Missouri, one a brother of Capt. Dixon, of the Missouri, and the other a boatman named Dunham of Holmes' Hole, who was paid $400 to hurry Pitman across to Falmouth on the night of the 20th inst.

MELANCHOLY FATE.—The Jamestown Journal, has an account of the death of Miss ARTHEMISIA EAMES a young lady formerly of Carroll, in that County, and at the time of the fatal occurrence, teacher of a school in Ohio. In crossing a stream on horseback in the evening, her horse took fright, and she was thrown off and carried under the ice. Her body was not recovered up to the 5th inst.

A Book for Every Body.

Decidedly one of the most popular and readable pamphlets, upon a proverbially dry subject, is Dr. Wood's "Hints on the Profession of Medicine." The book is not designed for the Medical profession exclusively, but can be read with profit and pleasure by all classes. Hear what is said of it by the Medical Faculty, and others:

From the Faculty of the Buffalo Medical College:

"It is a sound, well written essay, setting forth clearly and plainly, addressing itself to reason and common sense. More particularly do we recommend, that members of the Profession purchase the same in quantities for distribution in the communities where they severally reside, as in our opinion, the cogent arguments therein advanced will go far towards counteracting the influence and staying the progress of Quackery in all its forms."

From Nelson's Northern Lancet:

"To no man is the profession more indebted than to Dr. Wood for his masterly essay, which has been printed in the most unexceptionable style by the enterprising publishers, Derby & Co., and offered to the Profession at such rates that it should be the duty of one and all to purchase, give, lend and circulate as many copies as possible."

The following is from a journal of one of the special systems or schools condemned by the work:

"The subject treated of is handled in a calm, dispassionate manner, and many valuable thoughts and principles are to be found in the few pages here offered to the public. Its strictures upon real quackery, upon nostrums, upon the copied multiplication of the Medical Colleges, and upon the universal rush taking place into the ranks of the "regular profession," (reformed systems have not representatives enough,) are all called for and will be productive of benefit to all thinking persons or communities where they may secure a reading."

A large supply of the above Books has been received on sale, at the cheap Book Store, No. 5, State street. Price 25 cts.

DURLIN & SLOAN.

☞ HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.—We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Dr. Hoofland's celebrated German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, No. 120 Arch street Philadelphia. In cases of Liver complaint, Dyspepsia, Disease of the Kidneys, and all diseases arising from a disordered stomach, their power is not excelled, if equalled, by any other known preparation, as the cures attest, in many cases, after the most celebrated physicians had failed. We can conscientiously recommend this medicine, as being what it is represented, and urge our readers who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and they will be convinced of the truth we assert.—Advertisement.

PETROLEUM!

Another letter of Recommendation;

NEWVILLE, Cumberland Co., Pa.

MR. KIER—Dear Sir:—Having been appointed by your traveling agent when along last, agents for the sale of your Petroleum, and fearing it might not sell rapidly, inasmuch as so much worthless trash is sold by traveling agents, we only took two boxes from him, which has all been sold; Finding it to sell quite readily, and actually to answer the various purposes for which it is recommended, we thought we would order of you about four boxes more, as there is still a great demand for it. * * * * * *

In regard to the efficacy of your Petroleum, we might add, that in instance without exception where it has been tried, it was found to give immediate relief, particularly for pains in the limbs, back, &c., resulting from Bilious Intermitting Fever which prevailed in this section to a very great extent and invariably was followed by pains and swelling in the limbs. Your Petroleum in these cases, (without exception) was found to give immediate relief.

Yours most respectfully, MORE & STOUGH.

For reference apply to John D. M'Cord, corner of 5th and Wood streets.

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP ASTHMA and CONSUMPTION

Among the numerous discoveries Science has made in this generation to facilitate the business of life—increase its enjoyment, and even prolong the term of human existence, none can be named of more real value to mankind, than this contribution of Chemistry to the Healing Art. A vast trial of its virtues throughout this broad country, has proven beyond a doubt that no medicine or combination of medicines yet known, can so surely control and cure the numerous varieties of pulmonary disease which have hitherto swept from our midst thousands and thousands every year. Indeed there is now abundant reason to believe a remedy has at length been found which can be relied on to cure the most dangerous affections of the lungs. Our space here will not permit us to publish any proportion of the cures effected by its use, but we would present the following opinions of eminent men, and refer further inquiry to the circular which the Agents below named, will always be pleased to furnish free, wherein are full particulars, and indisputable proof of these facts.

From the Professor of Amherst College, the Celebrated PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK.

"James C. Ayer—Sir: I have used your CHERRY PECTORAL in my own case of deep-seated Bronchitis, and am satisfied from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion as to its superior character, can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

EDWARD HITCHCOCK, L. L. D.

From the widely celebrated

PROFESSOR SILLIMAN, M. D., L. L. D. PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, MINERALOGY, &c. YALE COLLEGE, MEMBER OF THE LIT. HIST. MED. PHIL. AND SCIENTIFIC SOCIETIES OF AMERICA AND EUROPE.

"I deem the CHERRY PECTORAL an admirable composition from some of the best articles in the Materia Medica, and a very effective remedy for a class of diseases it is intended to cure."

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 1, 1849.

MAJOR PATTISON, President of the S. C. Senate, states he has used the CHERRY PECTORAL with wonderful success, to cure an inflamation of the lungs.

From one of the first Physicians in Maine.

Saco, Me., April 26, 1849.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell.—Dear Sir: I am now constantly using your CHERRY PECTORAL in my practice, and prefer it to any other medicine for pulmanory complaints. From observation of many severe cases, I am convinced it will cure coughs, colds, and diseases of the lungs, that have put to defiance all other remedies.

I invariably recommend its use in cases of consumption, and consider it much the best remedy known for that disease.

Respectfully yours, I. S. CUSHMAN, M. D.

Prepared by J. C. Ayer, Practical Chemist Lowell, Mass.

THE ERIE COUNTY MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY

ARE now insuring Dwelling Houses, Stores, Shops and other Buildings, Household Furniture, Merchandize and other property against loss and damage by fire—their business being conducted on the mutual plan, making each person insured a member of the Company, and giving to each in proportion to the amount insured a participation in the profits. This secures to all alike fairness and liberality. They recognize the acts of their authorized Agents; to avoid litigation, arrange differences by arbitration at localities convenient for the assured; and in all cases promptly pay up losses for which they become liable. All persons, therefore, wishing to effect insurance upon property will find it for their interest to consult the Agents of this Company, whose officers are known, in preference to Foreign Companies, of whom you know little, or, (as many have found out too late to benefit them,) are insolvent.

"Secure the Shadow ere the Substance fade."

E. ABELL, the Daguerreian Artist

WOULD respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of Erie, and vicinity that he still continues his rooms over the Erie Bank, for the purpose of delineating the human face divine by means of the beautiful art of the Daguerrotype in the latest and most approved style. He offers to produce the likeness of any person favoring him with a sitting which shall be pronounced by competent judges, superior to the work of any other Artist whatever, for strength, beauty, and life-like appearance.

Daguerreotype, O what delight
To gaze upon its works of light!
How high the polish, pure the tone,
And every face is nature's own;
Sure never Art with all its skill,
The soul with such delight could fill.

His Picture being fixed by the cyanide of gold and other ingredients of his own preparation, can never fade out by exposure to air and light. Those who wish perfect Likenesses will please call at his rooms over the Erie Bank, and examine specimens.—Office hours from 8 o'clock A. M. to 5 P. M. in all states of the weather. DR. MARCHISI'S

UTERINE CATHOLICON.

THE undersigned, having become agents for this invaluable Medicine, would respectfully invite the attention of the afflicted to the great success that has attended its use wherever introduced, and its happy adaptation to the cure of the distressing diseases for which it is offered.

This CATHOLICON is in truth one of the greatest medical discoveries of the Age, and is destined to become identified with the health and happiness of FEMALES.

This declaration is based upon the fact that it will cure more than nine tenths of a class of very prevalent diseases, known as

and which have heretofore resisted the skill and exertions of the most accomplished Physicians of all countries to a degree beyond that of almost every other malady to which the human family is heir. It has already received the approbation and liberal patronage of very many prominent members of the Medical Faculty in the United States, willing to abide the truth, and having due regard for the welfare of their patients, and it is in every way worthy the confidence of the afflicted as A SUCCESSFUL, SAFE, and CHEAP REMEDY. Of this, additional proof will be found in the pamphlet, to which the attention of Ladies and Practioners is respectfully invited.

This medicine has never been introduced by empty puffs and misrepresentations, nor is it intended that its present popularity shall be sustained by any medium but its merits and the approbation of the public. The CATHOLICON is not a "cure all," but is intended expressly for those complaints incidental to the respectable female whether married or single—PROLAPSUS UTERI or falling of the Womb, FLUOR ALBUS, or Whites; CHRONIC INFLAMATION AND ULCERATION OF THE WOMB; INCIDENTAL HEMORRHAGE, or Flooding; PAINFUL, SUPPRESSED AND IRREGULAR MENSTRUATION, &c., with all their accompanying evils, (Cancer excepted,) no matter how severe, or how long standing.

REMOVAL.

THE undersigned having removed his Tailoring Establishment to the rooms directly over A. & J. S. Walters' Grocery store, lately occupied by Thompson and Grant, and opposite Brown's Hotel, would inform his friends and the friendly public generally that he still lives in accordance with the Divine command, "By the sweat of his brow," and respectfully solicits a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended heretofore. Having just received the Fall and Winter Fashions he is prepared to cut and make any and every garment in his line in a style not to be surpassed here or elsewhere. Also, Naval and Military clothing made to order.

☞ Cutting done promptly, and with care, for others to make up. JOHN GOALDING. Erie, Oct 24, 1851. 24.

CLEAR THE TRACK!!!

HAVING again taken possession of "Millcreek Mills," I am now ready to do all the custom grinding for my old customers and as many more as may choose to come. All grinding done when promised and warranted.

I will keep constantly a good supply of every article in my line of business. Especially a quantity of flour which they do say is Extra, but not so marked on the barrel. No extra charge made for delivering flour to any part of the city. JOHN ELLIOT. Erie, January, 17, 1852.—36. Millcreek Mills.

A PERFECT SAFEGUARD AGAINST

QUACKERY.

THE CHEAPEST BOOK EVER PUBLISHED. PRICE ONLY 25 CENTS A COPY, OR FIVE COPIES FOR ONE DOLLAR!

DR. LA CROIX'S PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATISE, entitled, A Physiological View of Marriage—a popular treatise on the secret infirmities of youth and maturity, arising from genital diseases in both sexes, with upwards of 125 colored and plain lithographs and engravings, illustrating the Anatomy, Physiology, and Diseases of the Sexual Organs, their structures, uses and functions, and the various injuries produced in them by solitary habits, excesses and infection, causes, symptoms and baneful effects of Venereal diseases, together with plain directions for the perfect cure of syphilis, gleet, strictures, &c., without mercury. To which are added very extensive practical observations on Sexual Debility, arising from nocturnal seminal emissions, or constitutional weakness, and its attendant sympathies. The whole illustrated by striking cases from Dr. La Croix's private practice. The reproductive organs of females illustrated. Menstruation, irregularity, or the entire suppression of the Menses, and their remedies by M. B. La Croix, M. D., Graduate of the Medical Department of the Northern University—Member of the Hospital des Veneriennes, Paris—Correspondent of the Reformed School of Medicine, and member of the Medical Society, &c. &c.

CAUTION.

In this book the nature of every private disease is minutely described, with their symptoms, and how to distinguish one from another—with receipts for the remedies, their management, &c., in obtain language. It enables every one to successfully and privately treat his case, (thereby avoiding the impositions daily practiced by quacks on the ignorant,) or to judge if properly treated. Young men who have been unfortunate in contracting disease, previous to placing themselves under the care of any doctor no matter what his pretensions may be, get a copy of this truly useful work first, as it exposes the trickery and imposture practiced by quacks, who advertise to cure private diseases in the public newspapers. Sold by the author, who may be consulted upon any of the diseases of which it treats. Any person sending 25 cents enclosed a letter (post paid) will receive one copy of this book by mail, or five copies for $1. Address Dr. M. B. La Croix, or box 1680, P. O., Buffalo, N. Y. Also for sale by the author, No. 56, Beaver st; P. L. Gilbert, under the Museum, Albany, N.Y.

FEMALE COMPLAINT.

Falling of the Womb, Gonorrhea or Whites, Obstructed, Excessive, Irregular or painful Menses, Dropsy of the Womb.

Dr. La Croix is often called upon by young and innocent females who have had their health injured for years by pills and nostrums purchased from celebrated female imposters, under the false pretence of effecting cures—those medicines in nineteen cases of twenty have an injurous effect upon the constitution, without producing the desired effect, or any signs of it. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results, will use none but which are the result of the combined knowledge and experience of some of the oldest and most distinguished physicians of Europe, and have been used by females embracing most of the gentility and nobility of France for the last 25 years. To eulogise their virtues would not add to their merits. The only precaution necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe that they are in certain situations (the particulars of which will be mentioned in the wrappers accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gently, yet so active are they.

☞ Price $1 per box. they can be transmitted by mail to any part of the Union.

Dr. La Croix invites all the afflicted, however hopeless their case may appear, or whatever their disease may be, or however many physicians or remedies they have tried, to put his knowledge and skill to the test in an examination of the case—it will cost them nothing. He promises to every case he treats a permanent and radical cure for life.

☞ The Dispensary is so arranged that the person so calling will see no one but the doctor himself, who is in constant attendance in his private rooms, ready and willing to render relief to all who may give him a call. Hundreds of certificates voluntarily given of cures, some of which are most astonishing cases on record, are for inspection at the Dispensary, all which are by his medicines.

Bargains! Wholesale and Retail.

Fall and Winter Goods selling at incredible low prices, at No. 1, Reed House.

HAVING taken advantage of the pressure in the money market, together with the consequent anxiety of city dealers to dispose of merchandise, and having bought quantities of goods at from one half to two thirds the manufacturers price I say boldly that I will sell many articles at lower prices than were paid in New York four weeks ago. Some may be incredulous—to such "and the rest of mankind," I would say walk in and see for yourselves. The proofs are "stacked up" on the counters thick and high. There you will find De Laines from 6¼ cents, upwards; Alpaccas as low as 12½ cents per yard; Callicoes that all will pronounce cheap enough; SHAWLS, from the principal mills in the United States of almost infinite variety of design and quality, the low price of which brings them within the reach of any one's purse; splendid Silk Velvets for Cloaks and Mantillas, of various widths, Dress Goods in General for both Ladies and Gentlemen are there in rich profusion.

CARPETS, too, that draw praises even from the lips of old maids—In short a stock so complete and so cheap as to distance in both these respects, any and all others in the city. Call round, therefore, you who want goods, and you shall have them at rates that will induce you to come again. J. D. CLARK.

NEW WHOLESALE GROCERY STORE,

AT NO. 7, BONNELL BLOCK, ERIE, PA.

THE subscriber having leased the Store No. 7, Bonnell Block, formerly occupied by Lester, Sennett & Chester, is receiving direct from New York, a large and well selected stock of Groceries, to which he most cordially invites the attention of the trade in this and the adjoining counties. He flatters himself that from his experience in the Grocery business, and his superior facilities for obtaining Goods direct from the Importers and Manufacturers, thereby saving the Jobbers' profits, that he can sell to the Merchants favoring him with their patronage, Goods

As Cheap as can be Purchased West of New-York,

And as cheap as can be bought in New York, with the addition of expense attended in getting goods to this city. Being determined to make his business Exclusively Wholesale, will confine himself to selling by the Package, if he can be sustained in so doing. He will be happy at all times to exhibit his goods to those who may favor him with a call. In addition to his stock of Groceries, he has added a choice stock of to an examination of which he would especially invite the attention of Hotel keepers and others in the trade. The following will comprise a portion of his stock, viz:

New Orleans, Porto-Rico & Cuba Sugars; Powdered, Crushed, Granulated, White and Yellow Coffee do. Porto Rico, Muscovado, & Cuba Molasses. S. H. Syrup, in bbl. or hhd; Old Hyson Gunpowder and Black Teas, in chests, half-chests and caddies; Old Java, Rio and Laguira Coffee; Virginia manufactured Tobacco, different Brands; Anderson's loose chewing, and papers, also loose and assorted size pap. Smoking; Black and Yellow Snuff; Domestic and Imported Havana Segars; Raisins, in whole half and quarter Boxes; Currants, Figs, Pimento Pepper, Cassia, Cloves, Nutmegs, Indigo, pure Ginger; Pepper sauce, Ground Pepper; Pimento, Cassia and Coffee in lb. and 1-4 lb. papers; Powder, in whole, half, and quarter kegs, Shot, Lead, Nuts of different kinds; No. 1 Pale, Excelsior, and Fancy Soap; Refined Elephant and Whale Oil; Sperm, Linseed and Olive do.; Mackerel, No.'s 1, 2, 3, in whole, half and quarter bbls., Codfish, Herring and White fish; Paints and Oils, several grades Brandies, Rum, Gin, Monongahela Whiskey! Old Port, Madeira, Claret and Champaign Wines; London and Philadelphia Porter; together with most kinds, and styles of goods kept in the Grocery line, and not enumerated in this list, to the inspection of which he would respectfully invite the attention of purchasers before buying elsewhere.

Particular attention paid to filling orders, and all goods warranted as represented or the money refunded.

New Shop! New Firm! New Goods and New Prices!!!

THE undersigned take this method of thanking the public for their former liberal patronage, and also to inform them that they have formed a partnership under the name of Derby & Montford, and will carry on the

GUNSMITHING BUSINESS

in all its branches, at their new shop in the new Block, two doors west of the Reed House, under H. P. Stockton's Jewelry Store, where they will be happy to wait upon all who may favor them with a call with the best in town. They have just received, direct from New York, an entire New Stock, among which may be found: Double and Single Barrel Fowling Pieces, from $2 50 to $50, a quantity of Rifle Barrels, which they are anxious to make up and Warrant, Revolvers, Pistols, Percussion Caps, Powder, Shot, Lead, Flasks, the nicest in town, Shot Pouches, Game Bags, in fact every thing necessary to the full equipment of a sportsman. Guns repaired to order, and done when promised. Gaining twist and common Rifles, manufactured to order and warranted to shoot from one to one hundred rods. On hand, A large stock of Gun Locks, all Kinds, Main Springs, Tumblers, Cocks, forged Brich Pins, dog Springs, Bullet Moulds, &c., &c., in short every thing necessary to build a gun, which are kept for the accommodation of the trade in this and the adjoining counties, and will be sold at wholesale or retail, a little cheaper than they can be bought elsewhere in this city. Please give us a call before purchasing. They are also prepared to do all kinds of Jobbing, in their line, such as filing and setting Saws, repairing Locks of all kinds, furnishing, fitting and repairing keys, repairing umbrellas &c., which will be done on short notice, and charges reasonable.

ERIE DAGUERREAN GALLERY,

Park Row, a few doors West of the REED HOUSE.

SHERMAN is happy to invite all who wish DAGUERREOTYPE LIKENESSES, who are at all particular what kind of pictures they have, to his new Rooms which have been built expressly for the Art. LIGHT is the great agent of the Artist, and it has been the constant study of all worthy of the name since the Art was discovered, to employ and control it in the manner best adapted to produce the most favorable results. The result of this study and of thousands of experiments is that there is not a respectable permanent Gallery in the U. States where the pictures are made by a common window, and he who says he can produce superior pictures by such a window proves his ignorance of the Art. The subscriber therefore begs leave to say that by his superior LIGHT, and with an apparatus worth six times any other in this city, he is enabled to produce pictures which cannot be equelled in this part of the country, and offers to excell any thing which can be produced in other rooms in Erie, or forfeit one hundred dollars. He has also a splendid Quick Working Camera, with which he takes children of any age! Let it be distinctly understood his pictures will not fade if properly kept.

N. B.—The "recent improvements" may be seen at the above rooms. W. H. SHERMAN.

DR. HOOFLAND'S CELEBRATED GERMAN BITTERS,

PREPARED BY DR. C. M. JACKSON, AT THE GERMAN MEDICINE STORE, 120, Arch Street, Philadelphia.

Their power over the above diseases is not excelled—if equalled—by any other preparation in the United States as the cures attest, in many cases after skilful physicians had failed.

These Bitters are worthy the attention of invalids. Possessing great virtues in the rectification of diseases of the Liver and lesser glands, exercising the most searching powers in weakness and affections of the digestive organs, they are withal, safe, certain and pleasant.

READ AND BE CONVINCED.

From the "Boston Bee."

The editor said, Dec. 22nd—

Dr. Hoofland's Celebrated German Bitters for the cure of Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Chronic or Nervous Debility, is deservedly one of the most popular medicines of the day. These Bitters have been used by thousands, and a friend at our elbow says he has himself received an effectual and permanent cure of Liver Complaint from the use of this remedy. We are convinced that, in the use of these Bitters, the patient constantly gains strength and vigor—a fact worthy of great consideration. They are pleasant in taste and smell, and can be used by persons with the most delicate stomachs with safety, under any circumstances. We are speaking from experience, and to the afflicted we advise their use.

"SCOTT'S WEEKLY," one of the best Literary papers published, said, Aug. 25—

"DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS, manufactured by Dr. Jackson, are now recommended by some of the most prominent members of the faculty as an article of much efficacy in cases of female weakness. As such is the case, we would advise all mothers to obtain a bottle, and thus save themselves much sickness. Persons of debilitated constitutions will find these Bitters advantageous to their health, as we know from experience the salutary effect they have upon weak systems."

MORE EVIDENCE.

The "Philadelphia Saturday Gazette," the best family newspaper in the United States. The editor says of

DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.

"It is seldom that we recommend what are termed Patent Medicines, to the confidence and patronage of our readers; and therefore when we recommend Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, we wish it to be distinctly understood that we are not speaking of the nostrums of the day, that are noised about for a brief period and then forgotten after they have done their guilty race of mischief, but of a medicine long established, universally prized, and which has met the hearty approval of the faculty itself."

Evidence upon evidence has been received (like the foregoing) from all sections of the Union, the last three years, and the strongest testimony in its favor, is, that there is more of it used in the practice of the regular Physicians of Philadelphia, than all other nostrums combined; a fact that can easily be established, and fully proving that a scientific preparation will meet with their quiet approval when presented even in this form.

That this medicine will cure Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia no one can doubt after using it as directed. It acts specifically upon the stomach and liver; it is preferable to calomel in all bilious diseases—the effect is immediate. They can be administered to females, or infants, with safety and reliable benefit at any time.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

This medicine has attained that high character which is necessary for all medicines to attain to induce counterfeiters to put forth spurious articles at the risk of the lives of those who are innocently deceived.

Look well to the marks of the Genuine.

They have the written signature of C. M. JACKSON upon the wrapper, and his name blown in the bottle, without which they are spurious.

THE JEW'S HARP!

In Erie's fair City at the Store of the Jew,
Is kept everything cheap, pretty and new;
To be convinced what we say is really true
Give us a call, then you'll never say no.

Silks, figured, plain and Satin dechenes,
Alpaccas, Merinoes and Muslin de Lains,
Mulls, Cambrics and splendidly embroidered robes,
Wrought in figures the most beautiful, various in modes.

Lace Capes, Undersleeves, Belts, Collars and Cuffs,
Together with a large assortment of fancy stuffs,
A large and splendid lot of Bay State Shawls—
Ladies we're happy to receive all of your calls.

We have Dress Goods of all colors, blue, scarlet and brown,
As pretty and cheap as can be had in the town.
An assortment of Poplins, plain, changeable, watered and plaid.
Far prettier and cheaper than any where else in the city can be had.

We have a fine lot of Hosiery and gloves—again,
We have Lawns and Laces, both dotted and plain,
With Insertings and Edgings, Cambric, Cotton and Lisle, Style.
Which cannot be excelled in beauty of patterns, cheapness and

We would also notice our importation of Wine, Rine.
The pure juice of the grape, grown on the sunny banks of the Free from all drugs and poisonous dyes—
None can its excellence know until it he tries.

We would advise our friends of its excellence to partake,
Not merely as a beverage, but for the "stomach's sake,"
For which sake it is good and certainly can do you no harm,
In its purity consists its chief and great charm.

To make quick sales for small profits we certainly are willing,
Unlike our neighbors we wait not for big profits and the slow shilling,
The nimble sixpence principle is ours—by it we abide—
By it our goods we sell and let them slide.

Now I do not want this community to be taken by surprise,
Or to think I am trying to pull wool over their eyes;
Or that I am at all inclined to be funny,
In saying I sell goods very cheap for the money.

THE GREAT SECRET AT LAST DISCOVERED FOR THE CURE OF CONSUMPTION!!

NEW SYSTEM AND NEW REMEDIES! TRIUMPHANT SUCCESS

NUTTALL'S SYRIACUM.

THE Cure for Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, Tickling in the Throat, Spitting Blood, Difficult Breathing, Bronchitis, Incipient, Confirmed, and Tubercular Consumption. IN THREE BOTTLES. Each one peculiarly adapted to each one of the three stages of CONSUMPTION.

FIRST STAGE INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION. In Blue Wrappers.
SYMPTOMS. Cough, pain in the breast, side, head, back, joints, and limbs, inflamation, soreness, and tickling in the throat, fever, difficult and quick breathing, expectoration difficult, slight, and frothy.

SECOND STAGE CONFIRMED CONSUMPTION. In Pink Wrappers.
SYMPTOMS. Costiveness, spasmodic cough, violent fever, night, morning, and mid day sweats, hectic flush in the face, and cheeks, burning heat in the palms of the hands and soles of the feet, expectoration easy, copious, and streaked with blood.

THIRD STAGE TUBERCULAR CONSUMPTION. In Yellow Wrappers.
SYMPTOMS. Diarrhœa, diminished fever, cough, and morning sweats, great and increasing debility, frequent fainting fits, slight delirium, and swelling of the extremities.

TO THE AFFLICTED. ☞ The appearance in Three Bottles of Nuttall's Syriacum is a new Era, in Medicine, from its novelty and direct opposition to the old

ABSURD AND INCONSISTENT ONE BOTTLE SYSTEM;

While its success, prepared in this manner, (Each Bottle containing a different preparation.) in curing the different stages which characterize Consumption, has established the Welcome truth of the Curability of Every Stage of Pulmonary Consumption.

☞ PHYSICIANS APPROVE OF IT, because it is based upon correct Physiological and Pathological principles. The Public approve of it, because it is common sense, and because they know from sad experience, that one preparation will not cure the three stages of Consumption. The suffering, disappointed, and discouraged Invalid approves of it, because its principles hold out a reasonable Hope, and when he uses Nuttall's Syriacum, his hopes are realized.

IF HE IS IN THE FIRST STAGE OF CONSUMPTION

and uses the First Bottle, his expectoration, difficult and painful, becomes free and easy His Cough soon gets well, the soreness, tickling in his throat, inflamation, pain in his breast, side, head, back, joints, and limbs are removed.

IF HE IS IN THE SECOND STAGE

and uses the second bottle, his fever leaves him, his disturbed slumbers become sweet and refreshing, his night sweats vanish, his expectoration, copious and bloody, assumes a healthy appearance, and at length disappears, his bowels become regular, his appetite returns, the flush in his cheek disappears, the burning heat in the palms of his hands, and soles of his feet, are felt no longer, his cough now ceases, He recovers and is well.

IF HE IS IN THE THIRD STAGE,

and uses the third bottle, his Diarrhœa gradually ceases, his weak bowels become strong, his cough and other bad symptoms disappear, feeble digestion becomes strong and vigorous, his stomach recovers its proper tone, and creates new, rich, and nourishing blood his strength returns, his wasted body is clothed with flesh. HIS LIFE IS SAVED! and he is

RESTORED TO HEALTH.

Each bottle of Nuttall's Syriacum has the symptoms of the stage for which it is intended printed in front of the wrapper, whereby every invalid knowing his own symptoms, can judge for himself ☞ WHICH BOTTLE HE REQUIRES, [illegible] consequently no mistake can occur in selecting ☞ THE PROPER MEDICINE.

☞ See Pamphlet in possession of the Editor of this Paper, containing Dr. Nuttall's Pathology of Consumption, Lectures on the Structure and uses of the Human Lungs, and certificates of CURES. ☞ Prepared only by Dr. Nuttall, Inventor and Proprietor. ☞ Price, $1 per Bottle.

ARRIVAL OF KOSSUTH.

THE arrival of this patriot in this country is likely to be attended with great enthusiasm and joyful greetings on the part of the American people, and why not? his has been a life devoted to his country, to the cause of liberty—to the elevation of his countrymen—therefore he cannot but be dear to the American people, alive to all that tends to elevate, to improve and to better. But the arrival of Kossuth cannot be hailed with greater joy than can the arrival in this City of Singer's Patent, straight needle, perpendicular action Sewing Machine. This machine is destined to work miracles and cause a great revolution in the clothing business. This machine is the most important and useful invention of the age. It has been used a sufficient length of time to be thoroughly tested upon a great variety of work, and in all cases is fully approved. It executes in the most perfect and satisfactory manner, the work of the following occupations, viz:—Tailors, boot, shoe and gaiter manufacturers, harness and saddle makers, shirt makers, Corset makers, Carriage trimmers, cap makers and hat binders, dress makers, stockinet manufacturers, glove makers, costumers, carpet bag manufacturers, truss makers whip makers and upholsters. And may also be most profitably used in making sails and awnings, beds and mattrasses, horse collars, oiled clothing, sacking bottoms, and map and chart binding, and indeed for any other purpose where stitching by hand has been required. This machine, which is about twelve inches square, and weighs 65 pounds, is compact, ornamental in form, durable in all its parts, not liable to get out of order, and is easily adjusted and operated. It will perform the labor of from five to ten persons, depending on the kind of work and skill of the operator. The best kind of Tailor's custom work can be executed with it in the best manner; and in making caps, and most other articles to which it is adapted, its work is far superior to that done by hand. The Machine will be constantly on Exhibition and for sale at No. 2, Commercial Exchange, French street, where all persons interested are invited to call, and may be assured of receiving abundant evidence and perfect ocular demonstration of the great utility and value of this invention. Those wishing to purchase clothing, are hereby notified that I can sell them cheaper clothing, made in the most durable manner, and with five times as much stitching on as that manufactured all by hand. A garment, which, in the ordinary way it would take a workman all day to stitch, can, by the help of the machine, be stitched in half an hour, and done in a manner far superior to that done by hand. Therefore, by the aid of this machine I am enabled to make better work, and at the same time cheaper work than those who manufacture clothing in the ordinary way. To be convinced give us a call, when the most skeptical can be cured of his skepticism, and the unbeliever's doubts cast to the four winds, and all sent on their way rejoicing that clothing can be manufactured so cheap, so durable and so beautiful, as can be done by Singer's Patent Sewing Machine. MOSES KOCH,
No. 2, Commercial Exchange, French Street.

NEW AND USEFUL Planing Mill and Lumber Yard.

On Eleventh St. East of French, Erie.

CARTER & BROTHER having purchased one of WOODWORTH'S IMPROVED PATENT PLANING, TONGUEING and GROVING MACHINES, as well as the exclusive right for using the same in this county, are now prepared to dress lumber in any of the above forms for all who may see fit to favor them with a call. The facility with which they can dress lumber enables them to put the price so low, which with the superiority of the workmanship, offer strong inducements to House Carpenters and all others who may be in want of dressed Lumber to give them at least a call and examine into the matter themselves.

Flooring dressed by this Machine is fully equal to that dressed by hand, both in the smoothness of the surface, and closeness of the joints, while it has the advantage of being of uniform thickness and width the entire length of the board, requiring no dubing or leveling to bring the surface even; hence a carpenter will lay double the number of squares in a day dressed in this machine that he can of that dressed by hand. The machine is so constructed, that they can dress lumber any width up to 22 inches, and any thickness up to 2 inches.

They also have CIRCULAR SAWS in operation in connection with the above, with which they can rip lumber to any width or thickness desired. Also, a very superior TURNING LATHE, enabling them to do any kind of turning required by House Carpenters, Cabinet Makers, Steam Boats, etc.

They are also preparing to, and intend keeping on hand constantly a supply of Lumber, especially Whitewood flooring and siding and Clear Pine. CARTER & BROTHER.

PHILADELPHIA MEDICAL HOUSE!

ESTABLISHED FIFTEEN YEARS AGO, BY

DR. KINKELIN.

North West Corner of Third and Union Streets, between Spruce and Pine Streets, Philadelphia.

FIFTEEN YEARS of extensive and uninterrupted practice spent in this city, have rendered Dr K. the most expert and successful practitioner far and near, in the treatment of all diseases of a private nature. Persons afflicted with ulcers on the body, throat, or legs, pains in the head or bones, mercurial rheumatism, strictures, gravel, disease arising from youthful excesses or impurities of the blood, whereby the constitution has become enfeebled are all treated with success.

He who places himself under the care of Dr. K. may religiously confide in his honor as a gentleman, and confidently rely upon his skill as a physician.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.—Young Men who have injured themselves by a certain practice indulged in—a habit frequently learned from evil companions or at school—the effects of which are nightly felt, even when asleep, and destroy both mind and body, should apply immediately. Weakness and constitutional debility, loss of muscular energy, physical lassitude and general prostration, irritability and all nervous affections, indigestion, sluggishness of the liver, and every disease in any way connected with the procreative functions cured, and full vigor restored.
